Finance Committee Acts Despite Morgenthau's Admonitions.

Measure May Reach Floor Tomorrow

Secretary Hints Action May Call for 2 Billion New Financing.

In the face of admonitions by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that the Administration may face a $35,500,000,000 public debt by the end of the next fiscal year, the Senate Finance committee yesterday approved the new coalition bond-payment bonus bill, by a vote of 15 to 2.

The bill may be called up in the Senate tomorrow, Chairman Pat Harrison told newspapermen. Only two members of the committee cast dissenting ballots. They were Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, up for re-election this fall, and Senator Peter G. Gerry (Democrat), Rhode Island.

The bill, which was substituted for the cash payment measure overwhelmingly voted by the House last week, would pay off the $2,200,000,000 bonus debt in non-negotiable bonds issued in multiples of $50, which could be cashed at postoffices for full face value, or held to accrue 3 per cent interest.

Called to Give Views.

Secretary Morgenthau had been called to testify before the committee on the probable effect of the bonus bond issue on the Government bond market. Although he spoke in executive session, it was learned that he said in effect that the issue would not do the bond market any good.

He also testified, it was learned, that bonus passage might expand to $11,300,000,000 the Treasury financing requirements in the next 17½ months, of which $5,800,000,000 would be for refunding of outstanding obligations; $2,000,000,000, which may be required to meet relief needs, and $1,500,000,000 estimated by the President as next year's deficit.

He told the committee the President will veto a cash payment bonus bill, however. As to new taxes, he said that would be a matter for Congress to decide.

President Silent.

At the White House, the President reiterated that he had no comment to make at this time on the bonus. Told that Secretary Morgenthau had said he would not sign a cash bonus measure, he replied with a query on the executive nature of the Secretary's testimony. Unabashed, reporters tried another tack. They referred to Morgenthau's statement that $2,000,000,000 might be needed for relief. Smilingly the President remarked that this was an example of reports that could come out of executive committee sessions.

On the other side of the Capitol, leaders who had helped rush to House passage the Vinson-Patman-McCormack cash bonus bill were noncommittal on the Senate Finance Committee's action. In one quarter it was intimated, however, that unless certain changes are made in the bill in the Senate, the House may demand a conference to work out differences.

It was Senator Couzens, one of the two members of the Finance Committee to vote against the coalition bonus bond payment plan, who told newspapermen many of the details of Morgenthau's testimony, refusing to be bound by the secrecy Chairman Harrison had imposed.

Bell at Hearing.

It was said Morgenthau would not disclose the President's attitude toward the pending bill. In many quarters, a recent prediction by Senator Harrison that the bill will become law and support of the measure by Majority Leader Robinson were believed to hint that the President will sign the bill.

It was in response to a question by Couzens that Morgenthau ventured the opinion that a bonus bond issue would not help the Federal bond market. Despite an earlier prediction by Senator Harrison that no new Treasury financing operations would be made necessary by the bonus bond payment plan, Morgenthau said the measure might require a $2,000,000,000 money-raising operation.

Daniel W. Bell, acting diretcor of the budget, appeared with Morgenthau before the committee, but neither took a direct stand for or against the bonus, according to Seantor Couzens.

The Michigan Senator quoted Morgenthau as saying he couldn't tell whether the Treasury could

Norris Sees Bar to Farm Control, Evokes Move to Alter Constitution

AAA Ruling Brings Demand for Legal Changes to Forestall Future Supreme Court Reverses; President Hopes Senator Is Pessimistic.

By Robert C. Albright.

Administration plans for a new farm control program replacing the invalid AAA yesterday encountered a flat prediction it will not conform with Supreme Court restrictions, as a move for constitutional and statutory court changes developed in the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Stressing the "sweeping" nature of the high court's AAA finding, Senator George W. Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, precipitated a stormy barrage of farm demands for curtailment of Supreme Court powers when he asserted belief that the AAA ruling bars extensive Federal farm regulation.

Informed of the Norris statement, President Roosevelt said he hoped the Nebraska Progressive was overpessimistic. He indicated the Administration hopes soon to lay a comprehensive farm program substitute before Congress. After luncheon with the President earlier in the day, Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson predicted the AAA substitute will be before Congress by the end of the week.

"Must Do Something."

"I don't think it is possible, if this decision is to stand, to pass any law that will regulate production, even though such regulation is fundamental to farm relief." Senator Norris had told the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"We've got to do something with this decision," added Norris, whose own TVA project is coming up for constitutional review by the court next week. "We've got to overcome it in some way."

This plea by the Nebraska liberal, taken up and elaborated by a succession of farm leaders and by former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, was answered by Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, in an impassioned final statement before the committee.

Smith Pleads for "Balance."

"The Supreme Court is part of our Constitution," Smith said. "Each judge takes an oath, as I do and every other Senator does, to support the Constitution. That is our bill of rights. Whenever they find it brought to their attention that the Constitution has been violated, no matter where or by whom, it is their duty so to say."

Brookhart insisted he and Norris were not proposing a constitutional amendment, but a plan that would shut off all constitutional issues from going to the Supreme Court, by barring consideration in the lower courts.

Smith retorted that such a proposal would upset the existing balance of power by making the legislative branch of Government dominant.

"I prefer a constitutional form of government," Smith asserted. "It is the fundamental presence of the individual's rights, that are inhereent and inalienable, that were written into our Declaration of Independence, sealed by the blood of the Revolution and have been adhered to from that day to this. It inheres in every State government. It inheres in our Federal Government. It is the charter of the people that

Peritonitis Sets In, But Poet Wages Gallant War on Death.

By the United Press.

London (Wednesday), Jan. 15.—Peritonitis has set in and great anxiety is felt for the life of Rudyard Kipling, 70, British poet and writer famed universally, it was revealed at 2 a. m.

Kipling was reported fighting gallantly for life. His physician and a nursing staff were in constant attendance.

At 3:45 a. m. it was announced that Kipling was sleeping "quite comfortably." Dr. A. E. Webb-Johnson, specialist who operated on Kipling, left the hospital at that time after being hastily called to his patient's bedside at midnight.

It was learned that the famed poet of empire rested fairly comfortable all of Tuesday, but was quite exhausted. He was too weak to speak to his wife, who held her husband's hand for hours at a time while he dozed.

It was revealed that when Kipling arrived at the hospital at 7:30 a. m., Monday, his condition was so grave that surgeons were unable to attempt the customary "shortcircuiting" operation for intestines perforated by an ulcer, and were forced to adopt emergency measures.

London (Wednesday), Jan. 15 (AP).—The critical condition of Rudyard Kipling, who underwent an emergency operation Monday, caused his surgeon, Dr. A. E. Webb-Johnson, to establish a watch at his bedside early today.

The surgeon arrived shortly after midnight to examine the 70-year-old author. A bulletin was issued announcing there had been no change in Kipling's condition, and the doctor decided to stay at his bedside for the remainder of the night.

Physicians said the ailment of the distinguished author-poet is one which may produce sudden changes.

Mrs. Kipling was not immediately called to the hospital, however.

Mrs. Kipling, who is American born, and their one daughter visited the hospital tonight and remained for more than an hour.

Woman Benefactress Declares Ashcraft, Son's Slayer, Insane

Hobbling on crutches into Justice Daniel O'Donoghue's criminal court like a character from a novel by Charles Dickens, a lame, gray, little old lady, Miss Fannie Stocking, of 3840 Fulton street northwest, benefactress of David Ashcraft, yesterday told a jury trying him for the murder of his 5-year-old son that, in her opinion, he had gradually lost his mind.

Miss Stocking, widely known for her welfare work, was the last witness of the day and surprise witness for the defense, which is striving to prove the paralytic news vendor was insane on September 12 of last year, when he held his child, David, jr., over an open gas jet in his basement room at 227 Third street northwest.

Clad in a dark suit, she was assisted to the witness stand late in the afternoon. Under close questioning by Defense Attorney Fred J. Icenhower, she told of how she met the crippled David Ashcraft in 1928, the year of his marriage, and how she tried to help him.

"When I first met David," asserted Miss Stocking in a clear voice, "I tried to help him all I could. I bought him his wheel chair, or tricycle, which he needed badly.

"David didn't seem right to me even then. He didn't seem altogether reasonable. I treated him accordingly, for I wanted to help him to become self-reliant and self-supporting."

Through the years Miss Stocking saw David. He seemed to be failing mentally, she testified. Where first he merely fell momentarily into fits of moodiness, toward the end of 1933 he changed utterly.

There was a time, Miss Stocking

Allen Resigns As D. C. Relief Administrator

Commissioner Meeting Approves Transfer to Welfare Board.

Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday quit as District relief administrator, a post he has held since the local relief setup was organized here more than two years ago.

In relinquishing his post, Allen said he was motivated by the belief that relief here is a permanent public necessity and that its administration should be by the Board of Public Welfare.

The Board of Commissioners accepted Allen's view and approved a motion made by Allen that took cognizance of the permanency of relief.

This motion stated, in part:

"Improved economic conditions make it imperative that the local communities carefully consider the best available plans for the humane reduction of relief rolls. Such reduction should not be carried out indiscriminately by curtailment of funds, but rather by careful check of the actual needs of individual cases.

"In view of these developments it is believed that the time has come to transfer the administration of relief activities in the District to an established social service organization.

"As a Commissioner of the District I recommend that all relief activities be placed under supervision of the Board of Public Welfare. It is a non-political organization, created by statute, and in view of the existing conditions, the logical agency to assume the responsibility of relief administration."

Action of the Commissioners came at a time when local officials and more than 20,000 "cases" were wondering what was going to happen to them in the next few weeks.

Question of Money.

Commissioner Allen had estimated it would require not less than $600,000 supplemental appropriation to carry the relief load on the pressent basis for the rest of the fiscal year. The question of money which might be needed was not raised formally.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said the board would carry out the edict of the Commissioners and would take over administration of relief as soon as practicable. That meant, he said, a very short time, the delay being caused only by the mechanics of transfer of books and such things. Commissioner Allen conferred with Street on Monday before he presented his recommendation to his colleagues yesterday.

Some of the language of Allen's memorandum which was approved by the Commissioners might have been quoted from the statements of Street, who was appointed to his post by Commisisoner Allen.

The policy set forth in the statement of the Commissioners, Street said, will be carried out as a sound public policy.

Significant Change.

Despite the fundamental change in the situation, the actual transfer of the mechanics is not expected to make much trouble or delay, inasmuch as the so-called emergency relief division has been operating under the supervision of Street.

The change is not to make any difference, at this time, in relief payments and details of functioning, it was said.

Pronouncement of the Commissioners was regarded as especially significant in view of the close touch they have had with Federal relief officials. Commissioner Allen, it is known, has delayed many of his relief plans from day to day until he received command from the Federal authorities. Confronted with another approaching emergency in the local situation, the Commissioner apparently deemed it the course of wisdom to lay the whole problem on the local doorstep.

Welfare officials are expected to present to the Commissioners in the next few days the basis of a continuing program which shall call for more money and an increased staff so that relief clients can be rehabilitated.

Hauptmann Denied Writ In U. S. Court

Habeas Corpus Request in Supreme Court Is Next Step.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 14.—Rebuffed tonight in a desperate attempt to obtain a writ of habeas corpus delaying the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, his attorneys announced after a conference that they probably would make a final effort through the United States Supreme Court to halt the execution scheduled for Friday night.

At the conclusion of a four-hour conference which followed denial of a habeas corpus writ by Judge J. Warren Davis, of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, Lloyd Fisher, chief of defense counsel, said:

"We have decided to act in the direction of relief in the Federal courts, probably in the United States Supreme Court."

There are two possible methods the defense may use in the new effort to delay execution of the convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

May Appeal to Roberts.

One is to go direct to Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court, who has jurisdiction over this district, and ask for a writ of habeas corpus, which means, "Produce the body."

A second method is to go to one of three Federal Circuit Courts of Appeals judges in this district, of which Judge Davis is one, to ask for what Fisher called "a writ of probable cause." This amounts to an appeal from the adverse decision made by Judge Davis late today. If they could get this writ from one of the judges—obviously they would not go to Davis again—the attorneys would appear before the three Circuit Court of Appeals judges sitting together in Philadelphia to argue the case.

Fisher said he had no assurance that a reprieve would be granted by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, adding that defense plans were based on no hope of an executive stay.

Hopes Fading.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 14 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann moved another step nearer the electric chair tonight when a Federal judge refused to grant him a habeas corpus writ or to stay his execution set for Friday night.

But even as this avenue of escape was closed, the man condemned to die for the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder was given hope for a few more days of life by a report that Gov. Harold G. Hoffman would grant a reprieve.

Rejecting all of the arguments of defense counsel that Hauptmann's trial at Flemington was surrounded by prejudicial influences, United States Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis said that to grant the writ he would have to overrule both the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals and the United States Supreme Court.

"The End," Says One.

"That is the end," said one of the five attorneys, who would not be quoted by name.

"The only possibility in the world is the United States Supreme Court," said Neil Burkinshaw, a Washington lawyer just added to the defense staff in a final effort to save Hauptmann.

Before going to the hearing and branding the writ application signed by Hauptmann himself in his death cell "a subterfuge and fraud," Attorney General David T. Wilentz said he had "reliable information" that Gov. Hoffman would grant a reprieve.

The chief prosecutor of Hauptmann made the statement to members of the legislative appropriations committee and added that if such action were taken he would need additional funds to fight the case.

Gov. Hoffman himself gave no hint as to whether he would prolong the condemned man's life. He could only grant a reprieve of not exceeding 90 days, the State Court of Pardons already having denied a plea for commutation of sentence.

In rejecting the two motions, Judge Davis said that for him to overrule the highest courts of the State and the Nation "would seem

Art Williams Abandons Air Search for Redfern

Georgetown, British Guiana, Jan. 14 (AP).—Art Williams, unsuccessful in an airplane search for Paul Redfern, American flier missing since 1927 on a flight from the United States to Rio de Janeiro, abandoned the quest today and started back for Georgetown.

A wireless message from Wanatoba, a post of the boundary commission mapping the lines separating British Guiana, Dutch Guiana and Brazil, said he was taking off on the return trip.

Williams, backed by Edward Sill, Georgetown merchant, started the unsuccessful hunt December 5. He was aided by Harry Wendt, a copilot, and a native Indian guide.

Reports that a crippled white man had been seen living in a tiny Indian village far inland led Williams, a veteran American flier, into the South American jungle.

Air Liner With 14 Passengers Reported Crashed in Arkansas

By the United Press.

Forrest City, Ark., Jan. 14.—The sheriff's office reported tonight a westbound plane from Memphis had crashed into woods 17 miles northwest of here.

A searching party left here at 10:30 p. m. in automobiles. An airplane from Memphis arrived a few minutes later to aid the search. The weather here was fair.

The sheriff's office had no details. Someone who witnessed the crash was said to have notified the American Airlines at Memphis—45 miles from here—and word of the crash was received here first from Memphis.

The sheriff's office at Wynne, 16 miles north of Forrest City, which would be within 3 miles of the reported location of the wreck, had no word of a crash.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 14. (U.P.)—Reports to the Memphis Municipal Airport tonight said the American Airlines plane which left here at 6:30 p. m. crashed or was forced down near Forrest City, Ark.

The plane carried 14 passengers. A report from Little Rock said it was two hours overdue there.

American Airlines attaches said the ship was piloted by Jerry Marshall. The co-pilot was Glenn Freeland and the stewardess, Peral Gasparini. All three crew members lived at Fort Worth, Tex.

Official said they would not announce the passenger list until they learn definitely what had occurred.

American Airlines officials said they last talked to the pilot of the plane at 7:18 p. m.

The ship was believed to be down in the swamp rice lands near Forrest City.

New York, Jan. 14 (U.P.)—American Airlines officials tonight announced names of five persons they believed were aboard their plane, which reportedly crashed near Forrest City, Ark. They were:

Mrs. Samuel Horowitz, Boston.
Mrs. B. Horowitz, Boston.
Sebea Horowitz, Boston.
Julius Cahn, Los Angeles.
Charles Altschul, Glendale, Calif.

All were going to Los Angeles and boarded the West-bound plane here or at Boston. Three others who boarded the plane at New York got off at Philadelphia or Washington.

The missing plane left here at 12:30 p. m.

Moscow Fixes Three Billions As War Budget

By the United Press.

Moscow, Jan. 14.—Spurred by fear of war with Japan or Germany, the supreme authorities of Soviet Russia today unanimously approved a military budget of 14,800,000,000 roubles ($2,960,000,000) for 1936, an increase of 57 per cent. By way of comparison the total military expenditure of the United States in 1935, for army and navy, was $590,844,112.

The central executive committee, corresponding to a parliament in capitalistic countries, approved the budget without a dissenting vote after fiery speeches by Premier Viacheslav Molotov, who charged Germany and Japan with warlike intentions; and Klementi Voroshilov, commissar for defense, who urged great expansion of the Russian military air force.

A large part of the military budget will be spent on increasing the Red army, which already numbers 940,000 men, according to speeches before the council. Better barracks, improved equipment and additional airplanes also will be provided.

Mikhail Kaganovitch, assistant commissar of heavy industry, stressed the importance of building up the air force, particularly modern bombers, in view of the unsettled Far Eastern situation. He said his department has facilities to create whatever aviation equipment is considered necessary by Voroshilov.

G. F. Grinko, commissar of finance, said the entire 1936 budget would be 78,800,000,000 (B) roubles, or $15,760,000,000 (B) under Russian arbitrary valuation.

It was explained for purposes of comparison with a capitalistic state's budget, that all factories and trade in Russia are State controlled and, therefore, the national expenditure includes not only normal government functions, but the amount private industry in other States would spend on wages and capital investment.

Military expenditures, however, in all countries is solely a government function.

The entire 1935 Russian budget was 68,500,000,000 roubles. Increased military expenditures account for almost all of the increase in the new budget, approved today.

French Fearful Reich Will Arm The Rhineland

Attacks on Franco-British Aid Pact Raises 'Scare;' Politics Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 14.—French newspapers expressed apprehension tonight lest recent attacks on Franco-British mutual assistance plans foreshadow a German remilitarization program in the Rhineland, but diplomatic sources expressed doubts of the sincerity of these "fears."

In these quarters the opinion was voiced that the "scare" over the possibility of Adolf Hitler's remilitarization of the Rhineland, which was prohibited by the Versailles Treaty, was raised as part of the French government's campaign to hasten parliamentary ratification of the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact.

Political maneuvers which may endanger the cabinet of Premier Pierre Laval late this week overshadowed the Italo-Ethiopian situation. Feverish activity was revived in the Chamber of Deputies and Senate lobbies as Parliament resumed sessions after a brief recess and leaders of various factions pushed their interests in the coming chamber elections.

London, Jan. 14 (AP).—A surprise meeting of the defense sub-committee of the British cabinet was held late today directly on the heels of sensational reports from Paris that France feared a new Hitler coup in the demilitarized Rhineland zone.

The government quickly denied it had any substantiation of the report. These hinted of a possible German maneuver to fortify the Rhineland and were linked with the Anglo-French agreement for mutual military support in case of an Italian attack.

The foreign office was uncommunicative on the purpose of the ministers' 2½-hour meeting and stated simply the "same subject as yesterday" was discussed.

The session yesterday was reported to have talked about the defense requirements budget. It was believed also that the leaders dealt at length with the country's military preparedness situation in advance of the League Council meeting Monday.

Sweden, in Sharp Note to Italy, Protests Ambulance Bombing

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, Jan. 14.—The Swedish government, in a note handed to the Italian minister today, protested against the Italian bombing of a Swedish ambulance unit in Ethiopia, in which it said one Swedish subject was killed and another wounded.

The note said a statement by Italian military authorities that the bombing was in reprisal for an Ethiopian violation of war laws could not be regarded as an excuse for an attack on an ambulance. The Swedish unit, the government stated, had never abused the international treaty under which the Red Cross is guaranteed protection in war time.

Investigation of the bombing, the note asserted, revealed that it was in the nature of a direct assault upon an ambulance in which wounded Ethiopian soldiers were being treated.

Sweden took note of Italy's expression of regret, said the protest, and expected that the promised investigation of the attack would be pursued with the utmost vigor and that those responsible would be brought to account.

The Stefani (official Italian) News Agency said recently the Italian bombing near Dolo December 30, in which the Swedish Red Cross unit was struck, occurred after Ethiopians captured and beheaded an Italian pilot, Tito Minniti.

The Italian government, it was disclosed January 2, officially expressed regret to the Swedish minister in Rome, but said the bombing was in reprisal for an "atrocity committed by the Ethiopians." It warned Sweden against "tendentious versions of the incident."

Agriculture, Treasury Departments Seek Solution Today.

Hopes to Save Jobs, President Indicates

Officials Doubt Power to Issue Salaries for January.

AAA employes facing loss of jobs were assured yesterday of the moral support of President Roosevelt, but not until today, despite two opinions handed down yesterday by Comptroller General McCarl, will they know whether they are to get pay checks for the last two weeks' work.

McCarl, passing on the fiscal fate of 6,600 Agricultural Adjustment Administration employes (all but 1,000 of them in Washington) and 2,500 Internal Revenue employes (600 here and the remainder in the field), ruled as follows:

1. Because data supplied by Secretary Wallace in his request for advice "does not disclose sufficient facts," judgement on the 6,600 AAA workers is deferred.

2. Treasury employes assigned to the Internal Revenue Bureau in connection with collection of AAA processing taxes are entitled to no further salary payments if such payments come out of funds derived from processing taxes, which have been outlawed by the Supreme Court

9,100 Employes Affected.

Stating they would continue negotiations with the Comptroller General in an effort to unravel the snarled pay roll question, Treasury and Agriculture leaders were still uncertain last night whether authority exists to meet today's pay roll, so far as the 9,100 affected employes are concerned

Although the opinion in the Treasury case indicates further salary payments are illegal, that department refused to state that the 2,500 workers in this group would not be paid today on schedule.

It was learned, in spite of secrecy surrounding the overtime call, that the Treasury's voucher and auditing section worked most of last night on the AAA payroll, indicating that all will be in readiness to meet salaries today on schedule if payment is authorized. The tabulating work was still going on at midnight in the Treasury annex on Madison place. Not in months have employes of the section been called in for night work.

President Expresses Hope.

Almost simultaneously with the pronouncements by McCarl, President Roosevelt voiced hope for prompt passage of a farm relief program which would utilize the present administrative setup of AAA. At his press conference, he praised the efficiency of the workers facing dismissal and expressed the wish that if they are demobilized on a furlough basis, as planned, they can be brought together again to man whatever substitute agency is formed.

Following are the immediate effects of the Controller General's replies to the Secretaries of the Treasury and the Department of Agriculture:

Five hundred and ninety-five "temporary" employes of the AAA, all of whom are in Washington, have been given notice of dismissal or will receive notice at once.

About 1,000 Administration workers in Washington will be placed on indefinite furlough as of January 31.

595 Outright Discharges.

No AAA employes, except the 595 who were hired on a 90-day basis, will be discharged outright. Dismissed on furloughs, to prevent utter demobilization of the Administration's administrative force, they will receive the accrued leave to which they are entitled.

A skeleton staff will be retained in any eventuality for the purpose of liquidating accounts and forming a nucleus for whatever other farm aid bureau may be set up by Congress in the AAA's stead.

It was brought out that 3,000 to 4,000 workers would be needed if Congress decides to fulfill its "moral obligation" to farmers and make payment of $283,000,000 still outstanding on contracts.

Meeting with representatives of the American Federation of Government Employes and the National Federation of Federal Employes, Administrator Davis assured them that every effort will be made to provide as adequately as possible for the clerks facing dismissal.

Because the query of Secretary

German U-Boat War Prolonged By Pact Rumor

Munitions Inquiry Hears Berlin Believed Britain and U. S. Aligned.

By Felix Bruner.

Germany was ready to abandon sinking of merchant ships without notice late in 1915, until German officials became convinced that a secret agreement existed between the United States and Great Britain, a letter from the files of the State Department, introduced at the Senate Munitions Committee hearing yesterday, indicated.

The letter was written by James W. Gerard, then ambassador to Germany, to Robert Lansing, then Secretary of State. Although the message was undated, its sequence in connection with a great mass of other correspondence put into the record, indicated it was written in late 1915 or early 1916.

"I think," Gerard wrote, "Germany was about to offer to sink no merchant ships without notice and putting crews, &c., in safety, if England would disarm merchant ships, but now, since the President's letter to Stone, both the chancellor and Von Jagow say they are convinced that America has a secret understanding with England and nothing can be arranged.

Stone's Stand Worried Wilson.

The Stone referred to in the letter was Senator Stone, of Missouri, then chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The Wilson letter referred to was not put in evidence, but other correspondence by President Wilson indicated he was worried because of Stone's opposition to Administration war policies.

The hearing yesterday consisted almost entirely of reading by Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, of correspondence from State Department files covering the months before the entry of the United States into the war. J. P. Morgan, and his partners, George Whitney and Thomas W. Lamont, quietly listened to the reading. They were told that they might be excused for the afternoon but they decided they preferred to remain and listen to Clark "testify."

Stone's alleged pro-German inclinations were involved in some of the correspondence. A letter from Lansing to Wilson, written December 21, 1915, said:

"Stone clearly indicated (in a talk with Lansing) that he thought we were bearing too severely on the Teutonic allies and were not pressing Great Britain as strongly as we should in insisting upon our trade rights.

Hoped to Change Attitude.

"I hope that you will find it possible as soon as you return to Washington to ask Senator Stone to come and see if something can not be done to change his attitude, as it will otherwise make the situation one which will be hard to handle."

To this Wilson replied:

"This is indeed not a little disturbing, but I think it comes from other quarters than the Senator's own personal thinking * * * I shall have a talk with the Senator at the earliest possible moment after my return and shall try my best to make the situation as a whole so clear to him that he will take our view of it."

Commenting on other correspondence put into the record, Clark expressed the opinion that it was "apparent from the record that Great Britain never took American Government protests (against interference with shipping) seriously and they never were pressed by the American Government." He quoted from Lansing's memoirs to show that early in the war the Secretary of State was convinced the United States would eventually enter the war on the side of the allies.

"Wasn't this at a time when Lansing was custodian of our neutrality under a discretionary neutrality policy?" Chairman Nye asked.

Britain Balked at Law.

The early part of the correspondence had to do with efforts of the United States to persuade Britain to observe accepted international law regarding shipping. Britain agreed with considerable modifications. Later, it was shown, through embargoes England controlled shipments of such raw materials as manganese, wool and rubber. It was agreed that raw materials might be sent to the United States from British colonies on agreement that they would not be exported from this country, except under licenses prescribed by Britain. A long series of messages from Lansing to Page expressed the protests of American manufacturers.

Nye insisted that the import situation gave American manufacturers a direct interest in the allied cause.

A letter from German Ambassador Von Bernstorff to Bryan, discussing the situation, said:

"The Imperial Embassy must, therefore, assume that the United States Government acquiesces in the violations of international law by Great Britain."

Sought Safety of Crews.

Later, letters showed, Lansing suggested to Britain that it be understood that merchant vessels could be boarded and, if carrying contraband, could be sunk, so long as the crews were taken off. At the same time, it was suggested, submarines should not attack a ship until the crew had been taken off. Wilson wrote that this met with his approval.

Another letter from Lansing to Wilson expressed concern over Page's attitude and added, "he certoinly is influenced very strongly by the atmosphere in which he is, and I frequently doubt whether he urges the cases involving American rights with the force and vigor which he should as American Ambassador."

The record showed that Britain flatly rejected American suggestions for ending submarine warfare, and the attempt along the suggested lines was dropped.

On the Hustings

'Good Citizen' Called Present Day Forgotten Man; Bonus Injustice; Democrats, Old Guard.

PERHAPS as much energy has been spent on seeking to promote good citizenship in this country as on any other endeavor. The "good citizen," Fourth of July orators have cried for a century, is one who supports his government without complaint, who pays his taxes without questioning why and who meets promptly interest payments on his loans, especially when due to his government. The "good citizen" who does that, the country has been told, will find his government fair and just and he will not suffer if he fulfills his duties.

Well, maybe so. But just now there is a large number of persons who, having tried to be "good citizens," feel that they have been prime saps, eligible for every sucker list in the country. Perhaps, after all, the government will justify the confidence its people should have in it, but after two incidents of the last week these "good citizens" feel they have become the "Forgotten Man" of the 1932 campaign.

The first of these incidents was the drafting of bills in Congress—one already has passed the House—providing for the cancellation when the bonus is finally paid, of unpaid interest due on loans to veterans. Nothing is said in these measures about the veteran who annually paid his interest in order to keep unencumbered the remaining equity in his bonus certificate. He can whistle to get his money back, while his less conscientious pal of the war days laughs at him.

And on Monday, the Supreme Court ordered returned $180,000,000 of impounded processing taxes to a group of processors—many of them large business enterprises with the ability to engage expensive counsel and carry on extensive litigation—while the "good citizens," the little fellows, among processors, stand a slim chance of getting back the money which they willingly paid into the Treasury.

* * *

There is no doubt if these obvious injustices in the AAA and bonus questions are not corrected that the precedents established will return frequently, like Banquo's ghost, to harass the Federal Government.

* * *

And speaking of the "Forgotten Man," what has happened to that mythical character of the 1932 campaign, projected as the particular protege of President Roosevelt? The Democrats seem to have forgotten him, and well they might, in view of the turn taken by the New Deal. If you want a chuckle or two in that connection, read again the definition of the "Forgotten Man" given by his creator, Prof. William Graham Sumner.

This is just a sample:

"If you learn to look for the Forgotten Man and to care for him, you will be very skeptical toward all philanthropic and humanitarian schemes . . . If you do anything for the Forgotten Man you must secure him his earnings and savings; that is, you legislate for the security of capital and for its free unemployment; you must oppose paper money, wildcat banking and usury laws, and you must maintain the inviolability of contracts."

* * *

When President Roosevelt a year or so ago declared that those holding Federal Government positions or those undertaking business transactions with Government departments should divorce themselves from the Democratic national committee, many believed that "forgotten man" would soon include Arthur Mullen, Bruce Kremer and Robert H. Jackson, that national committee triumvirate who established law practices here as soon as the New Deal was inaugurated.

Mr. Mullen and Mr. Kremer immediately resigned as committeemen from Nebraska and Montana, respectively. Everyone thought Mr. Jackson did, too. But he is still carried on the committee's roll call as the committeeman from New Hampshire. It now appears that his two colleagues had their fingers crossed when they resigned, for at the recent national committee meeting they were as prominent as ever.

Mr. Kremer came to the meeting as the proxy for the lady from Alaska, Mrs. Holzheimer. The night previously at the Jackson Day dinner Mr. Kremer enjoyed the seat of honor beside the President—with all the department and bureau chiefs looking on. Mr. Mullen, now trying to collect a huge legal fee from PWA, came to the committee meeting as the proxy for the committeeman from Hawaii.

The old guard may die, but it never surrenders.

* * *

Another member of the Democratic old guard who figured prominently at the committee meeting was Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, party leader in New Jersey. Mayor Hague, in 1932 an ardent Al Smith booster, last week sponsored a resolution praising President Roosevelt to the skies. Since one good turn deserves another, the President will stop for a few hours in Newark, N. J., when he goes to New York over the week-end, and thus increase Mayor Hague's prestige.

stand the additional $2,000,000,000 burden. The Secretary's estimate that, increased by the bonus outlay, the public debt might rise to $35,500,000,000 by the end of next year, did not allow for $1,000,000,000 that may be needed if processing taxes are refunded, Couzens said. Morgenthau was quoted as saying the banks hold 47 per cent of the public debt.

Senator Couzens remarked on the "seeming indifference" of Congress to this increase in the debt. On the basis of Veterans' Administration officall's tetsimony, he said taxpayers would have $1,000,000,000 less to pay if the bonus was allowed to take its normal course.

Bonds to be issued under the reported Senate Finance Committee bill would be dated June 15, 1936, and could be cashed at any time thereafter. It was estimated that some $1,800,000,000 in the bonds would be issued, while about $87,000,000 would be used to pay veterans odd amounts due them, in cash.

The coalition measure was substituted for the House bill by a unanimous vote, before it was reported by the 15 to 2 ballot.

Washington State Tax On Incomes Invalidated

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 14 (AP).—The 1935 Washington personal net income tax law was delcared unconstitutional today by the State Supreme Court.

The invalidation means the loss of more than $1,500,000 in revenue during 1936, the State tax commission said. The decision was five to four. The 1933 income tax also was declared unconstitutional in a previous Supreme Court decision.

WideNeutrality Sought to Back Anti-War Pact

Rep. Sisson Proposes Law to Permit U. S. to Aid Non-Belligerents.

Broadening of neutrality legislation to permit the United States, with the consent of Congress, to co-operate with other nations under the Kellogg pact, in event of war, was suggested to the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday by Representative Sisson (Democrat), New York.

Sisson told the committee that he believed the enumeration of articles other than munitions and implements of war should be left to the President.

"The embargoing of such commodities, however, when so proclaimed by the President, should be mandatory as applied to all the belligerents unless and until the Congress should decide otherwise," he said.

Congress Should Determine.

"I think the President should be required to refer the matter to Congress for such decision if and when a majority of the other non-belligerent countries have decided that one or more of the belligerents has resorted to war in contravention of the Kellogg pact, for Congress to determine whether we should take action appropriate to the purpose that this country should not be a hinderance to means adopted by such other non-belligerent countries to terminate or lessen the duration of a war.'

Sisson said he would make only this addition to the McReynolds bill, being considered by the committee.

"Unquestionably," Sisson continued, "if the people of every country knew that if their country went to war in contravention of the Kellogg Past that the other countries would outlaw such a country to the extent of applying an economic boycott, such people would, so far as they are capable of making themselves felt in their government, resist war measures. If military dictators knew this, they would hesitate before risking their prestige by engaging in an outlawed method of taking what they claim or desire."

Favors Reconizing Responsibility.

Sisson pointed out that the United States is a signatory to the Kellogg Pact, and that legislation should recognize that "we have some responsibility as a member of the society of nations."

"The amendment which I mentioned, and which I urge this committee to accept as a part of its bill, gives such recognition and is of value as a declaration of our policy in advance to the other countries of the world, and is at least one step in the direction of the prevention of war before its outbreak," he said.

He pointed out that the amendment would not give the President discretion to determine which is the offending country.

In the course of the hearing the committee forced withdrawal of a statement aimed at Secretary Hull. Representatives of Sons of Italy of America, American Friends of Italy and the League for American Neutrality demanded that Italy and Ethiopia be exempted from additional neutrality legislation.

Frank A. Cassassa, Revere, Mass., testifying, declared that Hull had written the League of Nations in favor of sanctions. Committeemen indignantly demanded that he prove the charge, and he was dismissed with the admonition that he obtain proof. Later he returned and withdrew the statement.

Certificate Lost In P.O. Fire Found

Atlanta, Jan. 14 (AP).—A $10,000 gold certificate which a colored woman said she found in Washington, D. C., was confiscated by Federal agents here today.

The agents expressed the opinion the certificate was lost when valuables were taken from the Post-office Department Building during the recent fire. George H. Broadnax, Secret Service agent, said he acted on a tip.

The woman gave her name as Emma Mae Morrow, of Carteret, N. J. No charge was preferred.

Former Bodyguard Of Long Dismissed

J. E. Welsh, former personal bodyguard to the late Huey P. Long and a sergeant on the Capitol police force for the last 18 months, yesterday was handed his walking papers by the Senate Democratic patronage committee, he complained last night.

Welsh said his notice of dismissal was confirmed by Dowell St. Clair, secretary to Senator Carl Hayden, chairman of the Senate Patronage Committee. The committee, Welsh said, objected to his circulation of several thousand cartoons portraying President Roosevelt in an unfavorable light.

Primaries, which may determine who will succeed the late "Kingfish" in the Unted States Senate, will be held in Louisiana next week. A House elections committee, which has prepared a confidential report to the House on activities of the Long machine, still is debating whether to entrain for Louisiana for a close-up study of the balloting.

Film Producer Clips Turner's Plane Record

Hughes Flies From Coast to N. J. in 9 Hours, 27 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 14.—Howard Hughes, lanky young millionaire Hollywood producer, wore nonchalantly the crown of the Nation's aerial speed king tonight.

Unheralded, he dropped down at Newark Airport shortly after midnight with a new non-stop transcontinental speed mark in his grasp, a mark bettering by approximately 35 minutes the existing record of Col. Roscoe Turner.

"There isn't a record that can't be beaten," he said easily.

Hughes, flying a Northrup monoplane belonging to Jacqueline Cochrane, feminine speed ace, flew from Burbank, Calif., to Newark in 9 hours 27 minutes 10 seconds, smashing Turner's mark of 10 hours 2 minutes 51 seconds set in September, 1934.

He took off without public notice in the afternoon, and with his wireless out of order, raced unobserved across the continent at an average speed of about 260 miles an hour at altitudes from 15,000 to 18,000 feet. Over one stretch between Indianapolis and Columbus he attained a speed of approximately 295 miles an hour.

Hughes, who is 33, now holds two of the major air records. Last summer he achieved the national speed record for land planes over a closed course when he flew 352.46 miles an hour.

Although he did not get to bed until after 4:30 a. m., Hughes was up by 9 a. m. to receive callers in the wrinkled gray suit worn on the flight.

"I've been wanting to do this for three years," he said. "I feel pretty good about it.'

He plans to fly back to the coast in a few days on a leisurely schedule, making a few stops en route, and with no intention of attempting to break his own record—even though he adheres to the belief records are made to be broken. He indicated, however, he would contest efforts to take his transcontinental crown from him.

AAA Tax Donation To Charities Urged

By the United Press.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 14.—Nat Milgram, official of a large grocery chain here, tonight demanded of millers and meat packers that they turn over some $200,000,000 of impounded processing taxes to charities.

Milgram advanced his proposal not only as "the only fair thing to do," but also as a solution of a situation which threatens endless confusion and litigation.

Already, distribution of some $6,000,000 in impounded processing taxes to 23 millers, meat packers and tobacco manufacturers by the the Federal court here has been tied up by the intervention of a group of Indiana bakers who allege they paid the taxes and should receive the money.

It is generally acknowledged that most processing taxes, in the final analysis, were passed on to the consumer, and there is discussion of consumers intervening to recover the money.

Kansas Dry Rally Hopes For More Arid State

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 14 (AP).—Kansas is "drier" than almost any other State, but not dry enough to suit the original prohibition State's active prohibitionists. So, dry forces will rally tomorrow at Newton, with hopes set on making 3.2 beer an issue in the forthcoming State political campaigns.

Dr. John A. Golden, Topeka minister, chairman of the Kansas prohibition emergency committee, said tonight he expects more than 400 delegates. Beer is sold openly, despite the fact Kansas has constitutional prohibition, in absence of legal definition of intoxicants. An attempt to outlaw beer died in a legislative deadlock last year.

Mayor, Chief of Police Held in $5,000 Bond

Decatur, Ill., Jan. 14 (AP).—Mayor Harry Barber and Chief of Police Joshua Cooper pleaded innocent when arranged today on a grand jury charge that they permitted this city to be run "wide open." They were released on bonds of $5,000.

State's Attorney Arthur O. Frazier, also hit in the grand jury's investigation of road houses, "immoralities" and gambling, was not in court to answer. His attorneys said he was in a Chicago hospital where he had just undergone a throat operation, and probably would be unable to appear for 30 to 60 days.

Nye Wins Award For War Expose

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 14 (AP).—U. S. Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, was announced today as winner of the Cardinal Newman award for 1935 for his "courage and insight" in exposing "the hidden factors which make for war."

The honor, established as a recognition for "outstanding contributions to the enrichment of human life in science, literature, art, humanitarianism and government," will be conferred within a month at a public convocation at the Newman Foundation of the University of Illinois.

Senator Nye's "distinguished contribution to world peace," won him the award, Dr. John A. O'Brien, director of the Newman Foundation, said.

Other recipients of the award have included Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State and coauthor of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact; Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, in recognition of his sponsorship of labor legislation, and Dr. Robert Andrews Millikan, of the California Institute of Technology, for his contribution to the field of subatomic physics.

Heath Posts Bond In Shooting Case

William H. Heath, 63, of 2112 Eighteenth street northwest, was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and released under $1,000 bond yesterday, pending the outcome of a bullet wound inflicted on his son-in-law, Willis A. Finch, 28.

Finch was shot in the mouth Sunday morning, when he allegedly broke into the Heath home and demanded to see his estranged wife, Mrs. Ethel Heath Finch, 26.

Physicians at Emergency Hospital said Finch's condition was still serious, but that he had an even chance to recover.

Commissioners Award Bundy School Contract

Contract for construction of the James F. Bundy Public School was awarded by the District Commissioners yesterday to John W. Hunt, of Washington, for $108,105. The Bundy School is to be built on the site of the old John F. Cooke School on O street, between New Jersey avenue and Fifth street northwest.

Contract also was awarded to the Northeastern Construction Co. for construction of the nurses' home at the District Adult Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md. The price was $161,161.

Eleven Students Face Ouster in Girl Case

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Eleven Southwestern University students faced expulsion tonight after a secret, all-day session of the university discipline committee.

The committee studied findings of a student investigating group which revealed what was termed "a scandalous affair" on the college athletic field last Friday night, involving a 15-year-old girl.

Patrols Battle Storm To Recover Bodies

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 14 (AP).—A new storm bore down upon the North Pacific Coast tonight, beating back patrols trying to recover bodies from the wrecked freighter Iowa and threatening another assault on shipping and coastal towns. From Eureka, Calif., northward to the Straits of Juan de Fuca coast stations displayed warnings of southeast storms.

Against a background of discolored sea and murky sky, the broken mast of the Iowa could still be seen where she crashed Sunday on Peacock Spit, at the Columbia River mouth, with the loss of all 34 men in the crew.

The seas were so violent that coast guardsmen could not approach the wreck.

Only six bodies of the Iowa's crew had been recovered tonight.

Anchorage Quarantined By Scarlet Fever Cases

Anchorage, Alaska, Jan. 14 (AP).—Anchorage joined the list of "quarantined cities" today as scarlet fever cases numbered seven, all mild.

The schools were closed and public gatherings banned.

Fairbanks, in interior Alaska, and Palmer, in the Matanuska Valley, also have been quarantined for scarlet fever and smallpox.

Ashcraft Trial

recalled, when David cried as he visited her.

"I told him to take a brace on himself," declared Miss Stocking,, nodding her head vigorously. She wore a gay little hat of red.

"'Take a brace, David,' I said. "Buck up, David.'"

In 1933, Miss Stocking remembered, the crippled vendor wrote her a letter and told her that his chair was broken. She had it fixed for him, and then he complained that one of the tires was punctured.

"I told David he knew the expert I had fix his chair couldn't tamper with a puncture," said Miss Stocking. "He talked to me over the telephone and was angry.

"'So that's all you can do for me,' he grunted, and then hung up."

In her opinion, Miss Stocking said, he emaciated paralytic, sitting nervously before the bar of justice in the wheel chair she had bought him, no longer could reason. Something, she thought, had changed him inalterably.

The crowded courtroom watched Miss Stocking curiously. Jurors leaned forward in their chair as she told of her fight to help an apparently helpless man—helpless in mind as well as body..

Defense Attorney Rebuked.

Before Miss Stocking took the stand, Justice O'Donoghue administered a stern rebuke to Defense Counsel Icenhower for attempting to introduce testimony reflecting on the character of the defendant's 13-year-old daughter, Helen Ashcraft, a witness during the morning.

The rebuke was given Icenhower from the bench after the broad-shouldered attorney asked Mrs. Elsie Redmond, a roomer at the Third street address, whether she had ever seen the girl in the arms of a man.

"You're not going to blacken the reputation of this young girl," declared the justice angrily.

Mrs. Redmond, a housewife, appeared for the defense. She told of affairs in the basement room the Ashcrafts occupied before the killing.

In her opinion, Mrs. Redmond said, under direct questioning and cross-examination, Ashcraft was insane.

Stared and Laughed.

From her upstairs window, Mrs. Redmond told the jury, she often saw him staring into space. Then, she added, he would be sitting in a chair in front of the house, watching little David at play on sturdy legs.

"Then again," said Mrs. Redmond, "I would see him laugh.

Cross-examination failed to shake Mrs. Redmond, who told of Ashcraft being left alone, of bringing him food and comforting him. Sometimes she found him lying across his bed, weeping.

"Did you ever ask him why?" queried Assistant United States Attorney Samuel Beach.

"Once," replied Mrs. Redmond, "and he said he didn't want to live anymore."

Both Mrs. Redmond and Mrs. Sue Fleming, landlady at the house, told of Mrs. Ashcraft's alleged relations with a man designated as "Heavy," a fellow roomer who, like the Ashcraft's, was on relief.

There was drinking, both testified. Once Mrs. Ashcraft turned a Thanksgiving roast of pork from a welfare agency over to the man known as Heavy.

Men and women came to drink and play in the room where the cripple sat helplessly. A man identified as Polak was one, and then there was a mail carrier, and there were two other women.

He will take the stand today in his own defense. The case is expected to go to the jury before evening.

Grain Firm Ousted By Board of Trade

By the United Press.

Chicago, Jan. 14. — The Rosenbaum Grain Corporation, formerly one of the most important grain trading organizations in the country, today was expelled from the Board of Trade for alleged infraction of board rules.

In addition to action against the corporation, directors of the board voted to expel E. F. Rosenbaum and suspend E. S. Rosenbaum, both officials in the company.

The penalties were fixed by the directors last October 24, after the corporation announced it was bankrupt and filed reorganization proceedings under Section 77(B) of the revised Federal statutes.

Officials of the board were prevented from enforcing their decision by a stay order which the Rosenbaums obtained from Federal Judge William H. Holly, in whose court the bankruptcy case was filed. Today Judge Holly removed the last obstacle to enforcement when he dissolved the stay order.

Every major grain center in the country was forced to suspend operations for a day when the Rosenbaum corporation declared bankruptcy.

Business Paced By Advertising, Professor Says

Hovde Speaks at Luncheon for Graphic Arts Exhibition.

Advertising is a business pacemaker, which can be legislated against but never made unpopular, Howard P. Hovde, assistant professor of marketing at the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, said yesterday at a luncheon of Washington advertising men.

"Not only in business, but for society as a whole, advertising is helpful," Hovde declared. "Like education, advertising tells people how, when and where to buy. Like transportation, it assists in the distribution of good by disseminating ideas prior to the physical distribution of the goods themselves."

The luncheon was held at the Raleigh in connection with the All Media-Graphic Arts Exhibit. William N. Freeman, head of the Graphic Arts Association of Washington, presided. Tomorrow is the closing day of the exhibit, which is on the tenth floor of the Raleigh. It is sponsored by the Direct Mail Advertising Association.

Praising the exhibit, Hovde said: "The right medium must be used to reach the market. Markets are people and advertising is an instrument of the marketing process, to sell people goods that they need and want, when they want them."

Norman Kal, president of the Washington Advertising Club, will preside at a luncheon to be held today at the Raleigh. Speakers and their subjects are: James Rotto, Lansburgh's. "Direct Mail;" A. D. Avalanche Buries Two in Ski Party

By the Associated Press.

Garmisch Partenkirchen, Germany, Jan. 14.—Two members of an international skiing party were buried alive by a vast Alpine avalanche near this Olympic settlement today.

The body of Dr. Herbert Steinbach, a native of Bogota, Colombia, and a resident of Zurich, Switzerland, was recovered and rescue parties were searching for Fraulein Swaben, a German resident of New York.

The avalanche, about 700 meters (2,296 feet) in length, suddenly descended this afternoon between the Schneefernerhaus, on the summit of the Zurspitze, Germany's highest mountain, and an Alpine shelter named Knorrhuette.

Before they could escape, the three skiers were overwhelmed.

3 Kidnapers Slain as Cuba Mops Up Gang

Rich Manufacturer's Son Released After Demand for $50,000.

By the Associated Press.

Guanajay, Cuba, Jan. 14.—Cuban army agents, whose fingers are trigger-loose in dealing with kidnapers, shot three suspected snatchers today and all but cleaned up the latest in a wave of abductions.

The three were killed in a running gun battle with soldiers shortly after they had abandoned Paulino Gorostiza, 8-year-old son of an affluent manufacturer. Gorostiza was seized in a Havana suburb early yesterday and held for $50,000 ransom, half of which was reported to have been paid.

Eight suspects were arrested and the army thus bagged all but one of its quarry. One man fled during the shooting and was sought tonight in cane fields.

Less than a month ago Army agents shot and killed four men in a search for the snatchers of Nicolas Castano, elderly millionaire, who was rescued from a farm after being held a week. Several others have been slain in abduction cases of the recent few months.

The gang which kidnaped Gorostiza was hemmed in on a farm by a force of 700 soldiers, sailors and police. The men abandoned Gorostiza in the foothills and he was taken by authorities to Havana.

Soldiers then encountered the suspected kidnapers and killed three of them in a gun battle. None was immediately identified. Col. Fulgencio Batista, Commander of the Army, personally directed the manhunt.

Passengers Saved From Doomed Ship

By the Associated Press.

Lima, Peru, Jan. 14. — The captain and other officers of the Chilean liner Cautin held their positions tonight aboard the 4,316-ton steamer, battered by heavy seas off the coast of Peru, after all the passengers and most of the crew had been removed safely.

Grounded in a dense fog on the southern tip of Lobos de Tierra Island, the steamer was reported by her master to be almost a total wreck. The cargo, which included cattle, fruit and sugar, was beyond salvage, he messaged.

All the passengers and 88 members of the crew were transferred to the American steamer Chimu—formerly the Grace liner Santa Catalona—which was expected to arrive tonight at Pimentel, in northern Peru.

(A dispatch from Santiago, Chile, said the Cautin, owned by the Compania Sud Americana de Vapores, of Valparaiso, Chile, carried 75 first-class passengers, 120 third-class passengers and a crew of about 100.)

An SOS from the Cautin this morning brought the Chimu, the Peruvian steamer Rimac and the Italian liner Orazio to her side.

5 Burned to Death.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Jan. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Virgie Willard, 26, and her four children were burned to death at their home near Taskee, Mo., today. A can of oil used by the husband and father, Poney Willard, to start a stove fire exploded. He was critically injured.

Burglars Steal Furnace.

Kansas City, Jan. 14 (AP).—Joseph T. Cousins asked police tonight to find the burglars who stole the furnace out of his basement. Two men appeared at the house where decorators were at work and said they had been instructed to remove the furnace. The decorators said it took about two hours to dismantle the heating plant and load it on a truck.

25 Marine Planes Hop At Miami for San Juan

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Twenty-five Marine Corps planes took off from Miami today for San Juan, Puerto Rico, for training flights expected to last a month.

It was the last unit of 30 ships from Quantico, Va., that paused here last week. Col. Roy S. Geiger was in command.

Political Tilts Here Forecast Exciting Race

Eaton, O'Connor in Clash; McCormack Assails Chairman Fletcher.

By the Associated Press.

Speeding developments gave proof yesterday, if any was needed, that the Presidential campaign will be the backdrop of exciting months for the Capital.

None in itself was of conclusive importance. But congressional leaders discerned a political thread linking many in a manner that raised new problems for them.

What happened in brief:

Representatives Eaton (Republican), New Jersey, and O'Connor (Democrat), New York, clashed in the house over the President's address to Congress and whether Postmaster General Farley was a Tammany man.

In his maiden speech, Representative Main (Republican), Michigan, charged Mr. Roosevelt with "political intolerance."

Republican Chairman Fletcher notified the Columbia broadcasting system he would periodically request radio time comparable to that given "the party in power."

Denounces Fletcher.

Representative McCormack (Democrat, Massachusetts, denounced Fletcher in the House for "subtly charging" the President had influenced radio chains to bar Republican campaign skits.

The President, after a conference with Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, on the discordant Democratic situation in California, said the difficulties would have to be ironed out by the party in the State. Presumably this meant rejection of the attempt by California Democrats in the House to have Mr. Roosevelt intervene to obviate a split delegation to the June convention.

Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, predicted in the House that Canadian reciprocal trade agreement would become a principal campaign issue. He denounced Administration tariff policies as "unconstitutional."

The action of Col. Henry Breckenridge in seeking filing papers for the Ohio primaries aroused speculation which led his friend, Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, to deny at Winchester, Va., that his name would be entered there. A Democrat, Breckenridge opposes Roosevelt policies. Byrd has found fault with some but is expected to support the President.

Some House members wondered whether Breckenridge might have been acting only for hmself or for the American Liberty League. Headquarters of the league said nothing was known about it there.

To the delight of his Republican colleagues in the House, Eaton referred to Farley as "the whitest lily ever nutured in the Tammany tradition since Boss Tweed went to jail." Democratic enthusiasm for the Roosevelt message reminded him of the saying "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib."

Defends Farley.

O'Connor denied Farley belonged to Tammany. If the attack on the message is the only one that can be made, he said, "then we might just as well go on vacation until November."

Before the political tempers subsided, Representative McCormack challenged Chairman Fletcher to prove the President headed off anti-Administration radio plays or stand "as a prevaricator."

In a letter to President William S. Paley, of Columbia, Fletcher earlier had said he would leave it to the public whether "your system is or is not exercising censorship of the air." The difficulty originated when Paley replied to a request from the G. O. P. for radio time to answer the Roosevelt message to Congress by agreeing "to allot the time that in our judgment befitted the circumstances."

This Fletcher found unsatisfactory. He made no immediate request, but said he would do so in the future.

Landon Talk Unaffected.

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 14 (AP).—The office of Gov. Alf M. Landon said today that restrictions on political broadcasts announced by the N. B. C. and C. B. S. radio chains will not alter plans for a national hookup to carry the executive's address at the Kansas Day Republican dinner-rally here January 29.

The Governor's office said both the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System had asked for permission to broadcast the speech over a coast-to-coast hookup.

Discuss Substitute for AAA

Harris & Ewing.

AAA Rule Held Bar to Program

no Congress or Legislature can violate.

With Smith's statement, the committee adjourned until tomorrow morning, when it will meet to consider Administration and farm leader recommendations for salvaging AAA.

As several details of the Administration's proposed substitute farm plans hung in the balance, Chairman Marvin Jones, following an executive meeting of his House Agriculture Committee yesterday, said he favored a domestic allotment plan linked with a soil rebuilding and conservation program, including leads to new outlets and expansion of foreign and domestic markets.

"This plan would entitle the producer to a premium on that part of the commodity which is domestically consumed, and the remaining part of his production would have access to the markets of the world," Jones said.

Wants Flexible Law.

Jones proposed "flexible" legislation, permitting different plans for different commodities and farm adjustments to produce all the market will absorb both at home and abroad.

Other developments were:

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in a radio address, said he was "not sure" that he was in complete accord with all of the recommendations made by his recent farm conference.

The House Judiciary Committee studied bills to curb the powers of the courts, but took no action, Chairman Hatton W. Sumners stating that he was "anxious to avoid haste."

Comptroller General J. R. McCarl ruled that Federal funds can be spent for only those AAA functions not invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre in a radio address favored continuance of reciprocal tariff bargaining to promote export outlets, as opposed to "preferential bargaining," favored by George N. Peek, former head of the Export-Import Bank.

Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, author of the Bankhead cotton control act, asked conformance of new legislation to the Supreme Court's AAA ruling, in a radio address. He again asserted that the Bankhead act, on which the court did not rule Monday, is still in full effect.

It was during a report by Earl C. Smith, chairman of the legislative committee of the Wallace farmers' conference, that Senator Norris proposed steps to curb the power of the Supreme Court. Smith had presented farm conference recommendations which he said would not conflict with the high court decision.

"I am in entire sympathy with your report, but you must have an act of Congress to assure this regulation," Norris interposed.

"But as much as we hate to say so, aren't we up against this decision and won't we find it impossible to draft such a law?"

Cites AAA Lawyer.

Smith said an AAA lawyer believed the farmers' plan was constitutional.

"AAA lawyers said also that the AAA was constitutional," Norris replied. "Don't get the impression I think the Supreme Court is right. I don't. I think the AAA is constitutional."

Norris was applauded by farm leaders who crowded the small committee room. The Nebraskan already has proposed legislation requiring unanimous Supreme Court opinions in constitutionality cases, and he disclosed yesterday he is studying other statutory restrictions. These, he pointed out, might obviate need for a constitutional amendment, which, he said, would be "difficult" because it would take a two-thirds vote by House and Senate and ratification by three-fourths of the States.

"At least," Norris added, "an amendment would take a long time, and in the meantime agriculture would be suffering."

Norris' proposal that "something be done" about the Supreme Court decision was the torch that set off a series of similar proposals by Western farm leaders.

Views given were:

Earl Smith, of Illinois: "If nothing else can be done, then maybe we will have to do something to the Constitution or the Supreme Court."

C. H. Brownley, of Sioux City: "I don't suppose anything can be proposed here that's constitutional in the light of what happened the other day. Congress should curtail the power of the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional."

Oscar Foss, of South Dakota: "Take away from inferior courts the power to hold acts of Congress unconstitutional and then the Supreme Court will never have the question before it."

E. W. Fine, of North Dakota: "I will not go so far as to say I want the Constitution of this Government overthrown."

Former Senator Brookhart: "There is no doubt in my mind that Congress can limit jurisdiction of the Supreme Court as it pleases. They can do it by taking away the right of the lower courts to rule on the Constitution."

Smith Lone Objector.

Senator Smith's was the sole voice raised strongly against any inroads on court powers, but he is known to reflect the beliefs of a powerful Democratic contingent from Southern States.

Among farm leaders appearing before the committee were President Edward A. O'Neil, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who said AAA's invalidation could be met by new legislation; Fred J. Brenckman, Grange legislative representative, who favored export debentures; officials of the National Farmers Union, who asked enactment of the Frazier-Lemke mortgage refinancing bill; M. W. Thatcher, of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, who sought enactment of the commodities exchange regulation bill, and L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Cummings was the center of a series of conferences among Justice Department attorneys, reportedly considering moves to offset a deluge of suits to recover more than $1,000,000,000 in processing taxes already collected by the Government.

Policeman, Child Killed.

Ponce, Puerto Rico, Jan. 14 (AP).—A policeman and a child were killed today and another policeman wounded seriously in mob disorders at Morois. A number of persons were reported wounded and some killed in gun fights in other parts of the island. (Recent Puerto Rican dispatches have told of riots and slayings attendant upon registration for the November general elections.)

R. F. C. to Back 2 Rail Issues For 104 Million

Will Refinance the Great Northern and C. & E. I. Lowered Rates.

Plans for the refinancing of $100,000,000 of Great Northern Railway Co. bonds, maturing July 1, 1936, at a lowered interest rate, and refinancing and reorganization plans for the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railway, involving about $4,000,000, were announced yesterday by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

After saying that "the country is in pretty good shape right now, with plenty of money and plenty of credit, and the only question is how to get them moving," Mr. Jones revealed details of the two railroad refinancing moves, both of which involve huge governmetnal financial operations.

The Great Northern refinancing was revealed in a letter written by Mr. Jones to W. P. Kenney, the campany's president, which showed that:

The $100,000,000 in railroad bonds, maturing July 1, 1936, at 7 per cent interest will be made to mature July 1, 1946, at the 4 per cent rate favored by the R. F. C. Fifty per cent of the 10-year bonds can be converted into stock at 40, and the other 50 per cent at 75, with call prices set at 105 for five years, 103 for three years, 101 for one year and par for one year, together with accrued interest in each case.

A stipulation of the agreement is that in lieu of a sinking fund the Great Northern agreed with the R. F. C. that if $20,000,000 in principal amount of the new bonds is not converted "on or prior to maturity, its presently existing funded debt, plus any additional funded debt created with Interstate Commerce Commission approval for additions and betterments, extensions and acquisitions of property will be or will have been reduced $20,000,000." This latter must include within itself any reduction occurring by exercise of conversion privileges.

The reorganization of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railway had proceeded to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, it appeared with Mr. Jones' announcement that "all the interested parties have practically agreed to rearrange present debts, which average one million dollars," and to pay a first mortgage of $2,736,000 to refund outstanding 6 per cent consolidated bonds.

This operation, on which the bankers offered 5 per cent, and which the R. F. C. is handling for 4 per cent, plus underwriting charges, is also in ten-year bonds, and is limited in authorized principal to $15,000,000. The Railroad Credit Corporation will be asked to take bonds of this issue to the (unstipulated) amount of its claim, it was said. These new bonds are callable at 103 during the first five years, at 102 during the next three years, and at 101 during the remaining two years.

Roosevelt Pays Visit To Howe on Birthday

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt left his desk late yesterday for a birthday chat with Louis Howe, his secretary, who is 65 years old.

Credit Men Elect Brown President

Brown has been vice president of the association for a year and a half, and for years he has played an active role in the organization. He is a graduate of Cornell University and a member of the Kiwanis Club and the Board of Trade. He is connected with Thompson's Dairy.

Stuart S. Ogilvie, assistant cashier and credit manager of the Second National Bank, was elected vice president. For some years he has been a director of the association. He is a member of the American Institute of Banking, and has served on its board of governors.

The association also elected five new directors: J. A. Bossle, of the American Oil Co.; E. E. Downham, of the West Brothers Brick Co.; R. F. Dyer, of J. E. Dyer & Co.; Humphrey Lloyd, of the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels, and Joseph Reichgut, of the Maloney Concrete Co.

Dr. Townsend Sees 'Serfdom Or Revolution'

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, back in Washington to lead the fight for his old-age pension plan, told the Optimists Club in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday that, unless wealth is more evenly distributed, America will face a "revolution."

The thin, gray-haired California physician, who would give every man and woman of 60 and over a $200-a-month pension along with orders to spend it all every month, recalled that when machines were first introduced in factories it was contended that for every worker displaced a new job would be created. But this, he said, has been proved a fallacy.

Those dispossessed of a job and earning power by machinery now have become an army whose number makes it dangerous to let them starve, Dr. Townsend said, adding:

"The machines are becoming idle because there are too few buyers. That presages a revolution of some sort. It is for us to decide what sort of revolution we want. It may be violent and bloody if we do not exercise judgment and tact and make immediate changes in our industrial and financial world."

Again Dr. Townsend said:

"An ever-lessening number of workers from the present onward into the future will be required to do the world's work.

"Unless our thinking men and our law makers recognize this social phenomenon and make provision to meet its consequences by establishing a more abundant and equitable distribution of our easily created wealth, there will be speedily brought about one or two things, either a government ruled by the rich and powerful with the masses in virtual serfdom, or a violent revolution of the poverty-ridden masses with its unguessable results."

Two Given Life Terms As Salesman Kidnapers

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 14 (AP). William Barham, 38, and Fred Stevens, 29, were given life terms in Forsyth superior court today, following conviction of kidnaping W. W. Pollock.

Police Group Elects.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 14.—The Hagerstown Police Athletic Association have elected Roy E. Davis president and made plans for the annual policeman's ball at the club here February 12.

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach—Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

Three Bayer Aspirin tablets, crushed and dissolved in ⅓ glass of water as a gargle. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back to permit this medicated gargle to reach the irritated membranes of the throat.

Your doctor will approve this treatment as perhaps the quickest, simplest way known to fight cold and sore throat.

The Bayer Aspirin taken internally will combat a cold almost instantly, and ease the usual pains that accompany one. The gargle will ease sore throat in a few minutes. For it acts like a local anesthetic in relieving pain and rawness.

When you buy, though, see that you get real BAYER ASPIRIN tablets. For they dissolve almost instantly in the stomach and thus start working almost instantly. And they dissolve completely enough to use as a gargle. Watch out for this.

Poison Bombs Blind Civilians, Say Ethiopians

Agony Inflicted on Helpless Natives, Villages Burned, Is Charged.

By the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 14.—Poison gas bombs which blind their victims and cause agonizing pain are being dropped in large numbers by Italian airplanes on defenseless native villages of both fronts, it was claimed by Ethiopians today.

Their ground movements balked by unseasonal rains, the Italian armies allegedly have resorted to wholesale bombing and burning of towns.

Ten worshippers were reported killed and ten others blinded in the northern village of Sakota when Italian bombers scored a direct hit on the little thatch-roofed church, which immediately burst into flames and was destroyed. In addition, many were reported wounded and eight suffered severe burns.

Leave Ruins in Retreat.

Ethiopian military sources allege that soldiers of the northern Italian army, being forced to retreat before the Ethiopian offensive in practically all sectors of that front, are deliberately burning villages and Christian churches behind them.

Two planes heavily bombed the southern village of Annele today and also spread poison gas, Ethiopians reported.

Ideal flying weather prevailed on the southern front for the third successive day after several days' torrential rains, which some quarters now believe were not the annual "small rains"—forerunners of the summer downpour—but were due to disturbances in connection with the recent eclipse of the moon.

Ras Nasibu, leader of Ethiopia's southern armies, in a letter to Gen. Rodolfo Graziani, commander of Italy's Somaliland forces, protested Italian charges that Ethiopia has violated international law in treatment of prisoners.

Decapitations Denied.

Nasibu's letter read: "Now I have the pleasure to make clear that in conformity with the order of our august sovereign not only are there no decapitations but we treat them honorably.

"You are wrong and wish to discredit the Emperor and his army on account of Italians who fall in the underbrush and who are not seized by our army.

"I call the attention of cultured Italians to the damages suffered by our pacific Ogaden population because of Italian soldiers who bombard civilians, invalids, wounded Red Cross encampments and, above all, throw poison gas bombs.

"All these facts constitute violations by Italy of her international engagements and gravely blot her honor."

Bullet-Proof Airplane Reported in England

London, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—A new type of monoplane, which its designer claims could be riddled by bullets without collapsing and which is built on a revolutionary principle never hitherto used in aviation, will make its appearance in the British Royal Air Force soon, it was announced today.

The plane, constructed of a series of wafer-thin spars and tubes, is known as the "Wallis Geodetic," after its inventor, Barnes Neville Wallis, one of the designers of the ill-fated airship R-100.

The plane's wings and fuselage, when bared of their thin fabric covering, resemble a web. There are no internal bracing struts, tie rods or ribs.

France Alarmed

Eden, foreign secretary, as to his course at the League meeting. It was understood he will be told to pledge British support if the Council favors further sanctions.

Some light on the situation is expected Friday when Eden speaks on foreign affairs to his constituency.

Reports published here that Premier Mussolini is in a more pacific mood and seeks peace overtures lacked confirmation in authoritative quarters.

Great Britain for the first time in many years was without the protection of any of her capital ships. The small fleet temporarily charged with home defense sailed on the "spring cruise," which will take it near Mediterranean waters, and at the same time the French fleet is holding maneuvers in the Mediterranean.

Remaining at home were only the aircraft carrier Furious, the destroyer Sturdy and a few submarines and aged destroyers. Four warships, however, have been recalled from the Mediterranean, where the bulk of the fleet is located, and will arrive within a few days.

Two Legal Moves Left; Stay Predicted, But One Lawyer Says 'It's the End.'

to me to be sheer inexcusable judicial egotism on my part."

"I happened to be in court at Flemington a couple of days during the trial," he said, "and in my judgment it was tried brilliantly on both sides by very industrious and capable counsel.

"Every Remedy Used."

"Every remedy known to law has been used to save this prisoner from electrocution, and if the prisoner goes to the electric chair, he cannot blame counsel.

"What is complained of here took place before the eyes of Justice (Thomas W.) Trenchard, one of the most conscientious and fair gentlemen of the State."

Issuance of the habeas corpus writ would have paved the way for a determination of whether Hauptmann's constitutional rights were violated at the trial at Flemington and whether he was being illegally detained.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper of the State prison, was named respondent in the petition, which was taken by defense lawyers to Hauptmann's death cell during the afternoon for him to sign.

Opening of the hearing was delayed when Judge Davis insisted upon notification and appearance of Attorney General Wilentz, who had not been formally advised by defense counsel of the proposed action.

Some of the charges made by Burkinshaw on the conduct of Hauptmann's trial were:

The courtroom was jammed by prominent personages from all over the country, all of which distracted the jury.

The jury's attention during testimony was distracted by disturbances in the courtroom, by motion picture cameras, and by "repeated outbursts" derisive of the defendant's testimony.

The summation of the attorney general was marked by "intemperate assertions and insinuations." "They are precisely what I say — an expression of personal opinion, more like the yell of a mob," Burkinshaw said.

These and other charges, including one that the jury was not properly sequestered and was subjected to emotional influences of spectators and others, were countered vigorously by the attorney general.

Fraud, He Charges.

"This is a subterfuge and a fraud attempted to be imposed on this court," said Wilentz. "They attempted it on other courts as well."

He declared that "every point alluded to here has been brought up before."

"As to the contention that there was not proper sequestration (of the jury), unfortunately when a trial takes place involving prominent persons or when a man takes money on false pretenses; when the child of a prominent person is lying dead on the ground, the Government does not provide against publicity of the situation," he said.

Questioning defense counsel on the new move to save Hauptmann, Judge Davis asked of Burkinshaw:

"Let me ask you this: All you've said here has been presented to Justice Trenchard, hasn't it?"

Burkinshaw replied it had not.

He added, however, that as to the exposure of the jury to hostile opinion, "it is my understanding, it has never been brought to the attention of the Court of Errors and Appeals or the United States Supreme Court."

"I wonder why the industry and skill of competent counsel is presented here for the first time," Judge Davis interjected at one point.

As the defense attorneys went into a conference at a hotel, C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense counsel, said:

"We have not exhausted our remedies and will not discontinue our efforts."

The application was taken before Judge Davis late in the day after the attorneys had been in conference many hours preparing it.

Col. Kimberling said Hauptmann would not be told of the adverse court decision until morning unless his counsel came to the prison tonight.

Hoffman Returns.

Gov. Hoffman returned to Trenton this morning, the first time he had been at the capitol since he left a few hours after the Court of Pardons turned down Hauptmann's plea for commutation of his death sentence to life imprisonment last Saturday.

He had spent the intervening time mostly in New York, but declined to divulge what he had been doing.

The convening of the 1936 Legislature—a session which some had speculated might bring official criticism of the Governor for his activity in the Lindbergh case—was uneventful.

The Hauptmann case was a subject of discussion in corridors and hotel lobbies, but no mention was made of it on the floor of either house.

Naval Limits, Begun in 1932, Nearing End

Breakdown of Conference Blamed by Japanese on Adamant Nations.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 14.—International naval limitation, initiated in Washington in 1922 and the only successful form of disarmament growing from the World War, was said in informed circles tonight to be nearing the end of its trail.

A five-power conference, called to renew limitation because the Washington and London treaties expire at the end of this year, reached an impasse over the failure to agree upon Japan's demands for a fleet equal to Britain's and the United States.

The conference's breakdown, a Japanese spokesman said tonight, is due, "not to the adamant opposition of the Japanese, but to the adamant oppositoin of other delegations to the Japanese proposition.

"We would be quite willing to leave observers behind (when Japan withdraws from the conference), depending upon the nature of the invitation given them.

"It is our earnest desire not to make international feeling any worse. We do not think our withdrawal will mean a building race, unless the atmosphere of naval competition is created by others. We do not intend to start one."

In a later statement to the press, a Japanese spokesman said: "Japan does not want or does not mean to build up to the level of Great Britain and the United States, although the present American program of building right up to existing treaty limits is a cause of uneasiness in Japan."

Delegates of other nations tentatively agreed to continue the talks on a four-power basis—Great Britain, the United States, France and Italy participating.

In authoritative quarters, however, this move was regarded as virtually an idle gesture.

Admiral Osami Nagano, head of the Japanese delegation, is expected to deliver the coup de grace to the five-power talks tomorrow or Thursday. Many observers feared his announcement might signalize the start of a world naval race.

Any agreements the four powers might frame would have to be constructed with "escape clauses" to provide for the uncertainties of Japan's future building plans.

Rise of 100,000 In Navy Reserve Sought in Bill

Measure Also Authorizes Civilian Commisions in Higher Grades.

An increase in the strength of the Naval Reserve from 43,000 to about 150,000 or 160,000 was revealed yesterday as the objective of a new bill on which members of a subcommittee of the House Naval Affairs Committee now are placing finishing touches. The committee is headed by Representative John J. Delaney, of New York.

Consideration of the measure follows by a month a conference at the White House between President Roosevelt and a number of high ranking officials at which time preliminary plans were laid to build up the peace-time strength of the Naval Reserve divisions.

The present Naval Reserve strength of 43,000 compares with 90,000 officers carried on the Army lists as reserve personnel.

However, of the 43,000 in the naval units, only 9,571 are listed as officers, while the rest are carried as enlisted men.

Allows New Commissions.

One of the provisions of the new legislation to build up the naval units is understood to allow the commissioning of recognized civilians in the reserve in grades above lieutenant commander. At the present time it is impossible to do this, and officers at the Navy Department contend that it prohibits them from enlisting outstanding doctors and lawyers who would be willing to serve could they gain higher ranking.

The cost of building up the naval units is expected to add about $7,000,000 to the $3,000,000 which was appropriated in 1936 for the Naval Reserve. This figure does not take into consideration any new armory facilities that might be necessitated by the increase in personnel.

The Naval Reserve is designed to provide the officers and men necessary in the event of war for the expansion and operation of the United States fleet and naval transportation service during the first 130 days after mobilization.

The various schools and training stations now in existence, together with those that will be established on the outbreak of war, are expected to supply the Navy's needs after that time.

Washington has one battalion of three divisions of the Naval Reserve, together with an aviation unit, all of which total around 300 officers and men.

In addition to the Marine Corps Reserve, which is classified as a part of the Naval Reserve although it is separately organized, has 500 men on its rolls here.

Washington officers were encouraged last night at the contemplated expansion of the reserve forces. One ranking battalion commander stated that the real need, however, was not so much an increased personnel here as an improvement in armory facilities. He pointed out that his units are obliged to drill in the streets.

Bruno's Wife Optimistic Despite Denial of Writ

Trenton, Jan. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann was talking optimistically of her husband's chances of escaping the electric chair today at the time a Federal Court denied his petition for a writ of habeas corpus and stay of execution.

She was in her hotel room, talking for the sound reels, while the attorneys made their arguments before Judge J. Warren Davis, a mile away.

Informed of the decision as she emerged from the hotel room, Mrs. Hauptmann exclaimed "My God." Earlier, after visiting her husband in prison, she had left smiling.

Arlington Asks Re-assessments Of Real Estate

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar 809. Clarendon, Va.

Other officers named were Ashton C. Jones, first vice president; Thomas E. Sebrell, jr., second vice president, secretary-treasurer and trust officer; F. H. Piggott, assistant treasurer, and Col. Charles T. Jesse, general counsel.

Members of the board of directors named were William A. Coates, Thomas J. Crack, Col. Charles T. Jesse, Ashton C. Jones, Clyde C. Lamond, Thomas E. Sebrell, jr., and Conrad C. Smith.

Considering the measure an emergency issue, the county board at its meeting yesterday voted to seek immediate legislation by the General Assembly to permit Arlington County to make a general reassessment of real estate this year instead of having to wait until 1938 as the law provides.

Informed by Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green that such action was necessary for an equalization of taxes in the county since there has not been a general assessment since 1925, the board asked that Delegate William D. Medley and Senator John W. Rust introduce such a bill and seek its immediate passage.

The board also voted to seek the repeal of the law providing that the State apppoint delinquent tax collectors and to have this power invested in the county board. County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse told the board his office was well qualified to collect all taxes.

Chairman George M. Yeatman and County Manager Roy S. Braden were appointed a special committee to confer with Representative Howard W. Smith on the matter of a central postoffice for Arlington County. Yeatman announced that following the conference a special night meeting will be held at which time citizens interested in the project may be heard.

A. C. Scheffel, chief of the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department, was reappointed as county fire marshal at the salary of $1 a year.

The board announced it would appoint the public utilities commission of five members at the February meeting.

The offer of Mrs. Thomas S. Wallis to donate a tract of land in Cherrydale as a park site for the establishment of a library was referred to Commonwealth Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas and County Manager Braden for study.

Expenditures amounting to $55,389.34 of which $7,119.89 represents the monthly pay roll was approved by the board.

A. J. Furlong, fingerprint expert, will be guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Arlington Kiwanis Club, 12:30 o'clock today, at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Indorsing a movement looking to having paid firemen in Arlington County, Mrs. Harley Gibson, former president of the Womans Auxiliary of the Clarendon fire department, appealed to the board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce at its meeting Tuesday night to support the movement.

John R. Malloch, president of the Arlington County Firemens Association, also advocated the movement and asserted that with paid firemen in the county the fire insurance rates would be reduced.

A special committee consisting of Walter U. Varney, E. G. Baldwin and H. W. Beattie was appointed to study the proposal and report at the February meeting.

Accepting the recommendations of F. J. Deuterman, secretary, the board adopted the budget, amounting to $3,500, for 1936.

Stricken with a heart attack while on his way home from his work in Washington yesterday, J. Lee Dale, 58 years old, of Vienna, died on a street car as the car stopped at Lacy Station.

Roy L. Lohr, superintendent of the shops of the Arlington-Fairfax Railway at Lacy Station, was exonerated of blame in connection with the death of Iver Steele, 32, of Waycroft, Va., who was killed January 7 when struck by a truck operated by Lohr.

Steele and his wife were walking on the Washington boulevard only two squares from their home when the truck, which police said was forced off the road, struck Steele. Mrs. Steele was not injured.

John Veitch, 76, a lige-long resident of Arlington County, died yesterday at the Alexandria Hospital. Mr. Veitch had resided in Ballston for more than 30 years. He was a retired farmer.

He married Miss Lillie Dennison, of Baltimore, and in 1931 they celebrated their golden wedding.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Howard A. Smoot, of Ballston, and Mrs. W. D. Ellett, of Washington.

At an informal meeting of members of the county board and the county school board means for financing the erection of a junior high school were discussed. Such a school is needed to relieve congestion at the Washington and Lee High School. It was decided that a bond issue would be needed to finance the proposed building.

The home at Leeway which was destroyed by fire on January 7 was owned by Robert R. Corder, it was learned.

U. S. Expected To Ask Grayson Arrest Today

Prosecutor Seeks Bench Warrant for Seizure of Ex-Treasury Aid.

United States District Attorney Joseph Chitwood, at Roanoke, Va., today is expected to apply for a fugitive warrant in Federal court at Roanoke for the arrest of John Cooke Grayson, former Treasury Department official, who is bedridden at the University Hospital at, Charlottesville, Va.

Chitwood yesterday received a bench warrant for the arrest of Grayson from District Supreme Court, where he is wanted to face trial on charges of fraud and embezzlement. The bench warrant was issued Monday by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue when Grayson did not appear.

Grayson's attorney, William E. Leahy, will probably seek an injunction to prevent the arrest of the former Treasury official. Physicians have described Grayson's condition as "distinctly bad" and believe that he would die if brought to trial.

Attorney Leahy was in Charlottesville yesterday and he visited the University Hospital. In the afternoon he started back for Washington. "I did not see Grayson," Leahy said. "He is too ill."

He did see Dr. J. C. Flippin and Dr. J. Edwin Wood. Both physicians, Leahy said, told him that Grayson was in a critical condition and that it would be hazardous to remove him to Washington.

Dr. Flippin insisted that Grayson was in too grave a condition from heart trouble to travel.

Grayson, formerly employed in the national bank examiners division of the Treasury, is charged with having informed Robert Stunz, former executive officer of the Park Savings Bank, when examiners were going to the bank for periodical examinations. This, the Government alleges, permitted Stunz to conceal shortages amounting to $1,500,000. He also is charged with conspiring with Stunz to embezzle $4,000 from the bank.

Protests Comment.

Representative Virginia Jenckes yesterday protested the comment of Justice O'Donoghue when he ordered the arrest of Grayson "in the name of justice and mercy."

Mrs. Jenckes said the statement of the justice that "it is better that one man should die in the administration of justice than that the public should lose confidence in its fair administration by the courts."

Student Pilot Lands On Hollywood Street

Los Angeles, Jan. 14 (AP).—A student aviator flying over Hollywood made a forced landing today on a busy boulevard, dodged traffic, careened through a vacant lot and crashed into a parked motor car.

Horn was 2,500 feet above Hollywood when his plane's motor went dead. He made a skillful landing in the center of a street as automobiles scurried for the curb. The monoplane taxied across Melrose avenue, a main traffic artery, and into the lot.

N. Y. Insurance Broker Sentenced for Fraud

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—A sentence of from 2½ to 5 years in Sing Sing Prison was given today to John J. Kemp, 51-year-old insurance broker, who pleaded guilty to charges of defrauding theatrical people, including the late Will Rogers, out of approximately $85,000.

Judge George L. Donnellan, of General Sessions Court, said:

"He does not deserve much consideration, but in imposing sentence I am taking into consideration the fact that he pleaded guilty and that this is his first offense."

Lack of Funds Cuts Activity At Falls Church

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

Municipal activities of Falls Church, Va., have been curtailed materially pending decision of the State Supreme Court in the East Falls Church withdrawal case and because of lack of finances.

This was brought out at the meeting of the town council Monday night in the town police station. Several proposed repairs and improvements were discussed, but action on them was postponed either because of the litigation or lack of money.

A delegation of citizens from Falls Church Park protested on the condition of streets in that section because of the laying of sewers by Arlington County. Mayor L. P. Daniel and Councilman B. F. Elliott, chairman of the road board, promised to seek repairs. Under the town contract with the county, all streets torn up for sewer construction are to be relaid by the county.

The Falls Church Fire Department asked the council to purchase two gas masks, fire hose and other fire equipment, to cost about $2,400. The request was referred to the committee on public property. The council levies an annual fire-protection tax within the town for purchase of fire equipment.

It was reported funds for road work in the town were practically exhausted.

The Fairfax County Young Republican Club will meet today at 8 p. m. in the engine house at Falls Church, Va. John Locke Green, chairman of the Eighth Congressional District Young Republican Clubs, and Phil Campbell, former member of Congress from Kansas, will speak.

The Fairfax County board of supervisors will meet today at 10 a. m. in the courthouse. The annual inspection of the county jail will be made.

The Fairfax High School Association has voted to donate $25 to the fund being raised for establishment of a rural recreation center near Clifton. Mrs. J. E. Staub, of Burke, was named chairman of the committee to arrange a benefit dance or other entertainment next month.

The association voted to give a $5 prize to the local winner in the essay contest conducted by The Washington Post. Mrs. Herbert Haar, of Lorton, has announced she will donate a similar prize.

The Oakton School and Civic League will give a dance tomorrow night in the school to raise money for welfare work. William Hite and Henry Hawxhurst are in charge of arrangements.

W. N. Febrey of the Southern Methodist Church has been re-elected president of the Oakwood Cemetery Association of Falls Church. Samuel H. Styles of the Episcopal Church, has been chosen vice president; Mrs. George Hawxhurst, representing Columbia Baptist Church, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Other members of the board chosen by the Protestant Churches of the town include Frank S. Birch, Guy N. Church, W. T. Westcott, Isaac Rullman, George B. Crossman and Charles A. Stewart.

The executive committee includes Styles, Church, Crossman and Rullman; the auditing committee Stewart, Styles and Rullman. W. T. Westcot was re-elected superintendent of the Sunday School. One additional trustee, representing the Presbyterian Church will be elected to fill the place of Dr. George B. Fadely, resigned.

A. P. Shirley of the Mills Building, Washington, was the first person to obtain a building permit under the new Fairfax County building ordinance which became effective January 1.

The new county law requires every person erecting, remodeling or repairing a building in the county at a cost exceeding $250 to obtain a building permit. The permits are issued from the office of the County Commissioner of Revenue free of charge.

The permit was issued yesterday by Deputy Commissioner W. Lewis Leigh. It was for a dwelling to be erected near Mount Vernon on land owned by Shirley.

Ball Conference Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 14.—Dr. Thomas W. Koon, former mayor, chairman of the annual President's Birthday Ball, conferred with committees yesterday at the City Hall. The dance will be held January 30 at the State Armory. Seventy per cent of the proceeds are to be used locally for the physically handicapped, the remainder going to the Warm Springs Foundation for treatment of infantile paralysis.

Plan to Restrict Council Denied By Alexandrian

Delegate Rosenberg Asserts He Only Wants 2 Other Officials Elected.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—Delegate Maurice D. Rosenberg, of Alexandria, said today that he had no intention of proposing legislation which would take from the Alexandria City Council the right to appoint certain important city officials.

He charged that the Alexandria Council has "jumped at conclusions" by assuming that he favored election of all city officials now appointed by the council.

In commenting on a resolution passed by the council condemning such a move, Rosenberg said:

"The council met and took action without first making an attempt to either consult or communicate with me. As a matter of fact, I had not even considered offering legislation for the election of all city officials now appointed by the council.

"The council," he added, "took the position I intended legislation requiring the election of all officials, including the city manager, police and fire heads, city auditor and city engineer."

Rosenberg asserted that he believes all of these positions should be filled by appointment, but that on the other hand he was convinced that the city attorney and city collector should be elected by popular vote.

The misunderstanding probably originated, Rosenberg said, when he announced that he had been requested to seek legislation taking from the council the right to appoint certain high city officials.

He said that he would prepare bills providing for an amendment to the Alexandria charter calling for the election of the city attorney and city collector. The bills will also provide, however, that the charter changes must be approved by the voters before becoming effective, Rosenberg stated.

Herndon Church Officers Elected

The president appointed Mrs. Seymour Robb chairman of ways and means committee, with Mrs. G. R. Bready, Mrs. R. S. Crippen, Mrs. R. N. Wrenn and Mrs. A. H. Kirk, assistants.

Policeman Reinstated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 14.—The mayor and city council yesterday accepted the report of the Civil Service Commission reinstating Clarence C. Robey to the Cumberland police force. He had been dismissed several months ago because of alleged dereliction, but the case was reopened when new evidence was presented, indicating Robey might have been the victim of a "frame-up." A number of prominent citizens interceded for him.

Later Meeting to Be Held to Elect New Officers; Finance Chairman Announces a Budget of $18,139 for Organization During 1936.

The Social Service League of Montgomery County appointed ten directors to serve until 1939, at a meeting last night in the courthouse at Rockville. Another meeting will be called in the near future for the election of officers.

The directors are Thomas W. Pyle, Walter M. O'Loughlin, the Rev. G. G. Kundahl, Mrs. Albert Fenderson, Mrs. J. Darby Bowman, W. B. Armstrong, Dr. Edwin W. Broome, Miss Estelle T. Moore, Mrs. George Young and Lawrence R. Smoot.

W. B. Armstrong, chairman of the finance committee, said that the budget for the next fiscal year had been set at $18,139. Of this, he said, $5,972 will be for administrative expenses, leaving $12,167 for the Social Service League to pay.

Armstrong and George W. Davis, chairman of the 1936 drive for funds, reported that $11,306 had been raised, although the goal was $15,000. The chief reason that the drive fell short of the goal, they said, was that it came just behind the Red Cross campaign.

Then, too, they pointed out, the Washington Community Chest failed to give the co-operation that had been expected. An arrangement had been made whereby workers for the Community Chest, in calling at homes in the county, would distribute contribution blanks for both the Chest and the Social Service League.

But the committee in charge of the Chest drive, Armstrong and Davis reported, disapproved of this plan, with the result that the league's cards were not as widely distributed as they might have been.

Mrs. E. W. Macey will speak on "That Other America" at the monthly meeting of the woman's society of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, Maple and Tulip avenues, today, at 11 a. m.

Navy to Maintain Pacific Status Quo

By the Associated Press.

An official Navy Department spokesman last night said that the Navy has no new plans for changing the status quo in the Pacific provided in the Washington naval limitations treaty which expires next December 31.

This statement was made with reference to published reports covering a Pacific naval base program for American possessions involving Guam, Wake, Midway and the Aleutian Islands.

The official said a naval station had been maintained for years at Guam, and still is in operation under the terms of the treaty.

It was stated that until the treaty expires, no consideration would be given any possible alteration in the present situation, which prohibits fortification and establishment of new naval bases.

Pinioned Man Drowns As Car Plunges in River

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 14.—Pinioned under an overturned coupe when it plunged from the Cumberland-Romney road at the "wire bridge," one mile from Springfield, W. Va., Henry Stewart, 45, of Levels, Hampshire County, W. Va., was drowned Sunday.

Walter Butler, who lives near the bridge, discovered the overturned car in 5 feet of water near the bridge spanning the South Branch of the Potomac River. He summoned police from Romney and the body was extricated.

Battlefield Park's Blocking Feared

Virginia Representatives expressed concern yesterday over reports that Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, opposed additional national parks in Virginia, and had obtained enough objections to block passage of the Richmond battlefield park bill on the consent calendar, according to the Associated Press.

The bill, carried over from last session near the top of the consent calendar, has been passed over once this session as the result of an objection by Rich.

Representative A. J. Montague, Richmond, sponsor of the bill which authorizes the Federal Government to accept the park, now the property of the State, said he would do all possible to insure the bill's passage at this session. Whether the bill will be reached again next Monday was not certain yesterday.

Square Bottle and all ...just as of old
A SQUARE WHISKEY IN A SQUARE BOTTLE

International Awards
Leading expositions in the United States, Europe and Australia have honored Mount Vernon as one of the world's premier whiskies

MOUNT VERNON of old is back—square bottle, age and all—just as before prohibition. Maryland straight rye whiskey, it is—bottled in bond under U.S. Government supervision—requirements of which, as to full 100 proof storage in barrels, and freedom from addition of younger spirits, are more rigid than those of any other country in the world. Every drop stowed away for at least 4½ years in wood, to sweeten and mellow. Try Mount Vernon now at good bars; get it also at better liquor stores. Call for the square whiskey in the square bottle.

Tabler to Back New Boulevard On Road Bed

Plans to Use Big Portion of $1,000,000 Fund, Board Reports.

Support of Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the Maryland State Commission, will be thrown into the fight for construction of a new Washington - Baltimore highway over the roadbed of the abandoned W. B. & A. electric railroad, it was revealed yesterday at a meeting of the Prince Georges County commissioners in Upper Marlboro.

The commissioners said Dr. Tabler planned to use for this purpose a major portion of the $1,000,000 which he proposes to seek from the coming session of the State legislature.

If the fund is granted it will be augmented by Maryland's share of the Federal roads appropriation, set aside by an act of the last Congress. The total cost of the proposed highway has not yet been estimated.

The road, if constructed, would offer a shorter route between the two cities. Under Government regulations, a 400-foot right-of-way would be required, providing for a four-lane boulevard.

The State Roads Commission chairman also had announced he has decided upon the rerouting of the Southern Maryland pike at the District line to eliminate the "death curves" at Lohr's Hill, it was learned from the commissioners.

Cut-Off to Cost $50,000.

The cut-off—a distance of about 800 yards, connecting Branch avenue southeast, will cost about $50,000. It also planned to construct an elaborate parkway as an entrance to the National Capital.

The Commissioners received a delegation from the county's Parent Teacher Association Federation which asked the complete restoration of teachers' salaries. The matter was taken under advisement.

In the delegation were Dr. R. C. Wiley, of College Park, president of the federation; William Mulligan, chairman of the legislative committee; E. B. Carman, of Cottage City, and William Dockendorf, of Riverdale.

The board also received a resolution from the Colmar Manor town council asking the establishment of a juvenile court.

Age Budget Approved.

Members of the board said they were continuing their investigations necessary for the set-up of their old-age pension system, which is now in its early stages. They have approved the following budget for old-age relief:

Rural couple (in the same house): $23.70 per couple, or $11.85 per person; suburban couple (in same house): $34.70 per couple, or $17.35 per person; metropolitan couple (in same house): $39 per couple, or $19.50 per person. These figures show monthly amounts.

At the season's first regular meeting of the Prince Georges County 4-H Club Senior Council, held recently at the Suitland, Md., School, Francis Underwood, of Oxon Hill, was installed as president.

Other officers installed were Carlton Thorne, Oxon Hill, vice president; Louise Pusie, Riverdale, secretary; Philip Robinson, Brandywine, treasurer. The committee members installed were: Program-Social committee, William McNamara, Oxon Hill Mildred Lee, Beltsville May Hugel, Suitland; Stanleigh Jenkins, Hyattsville, and Margaret Duvall, Suitland. Membership committee, Lee Suit, Ritchie; Miss Ethel Regan, county home demonstration agent, and P. E. Clarke, county agent; publicity committee, L. L. Hurley, Hyattsville; Carlton Thorne and Irene Wilson, Suitland.

Choice of Two Towns.

Certain property owners in the metropolitan area of Prince Georges County will be given their choice of living in Hyattsville or Riverdale—without moving an inch from their present abodes.

The boundary line between the two towns has never been fixed along the Calvert street section, and for many years has been causing trouble. So Monday night the Hyattsville town council appointed a committee to confer with Riverdale officials.

After appointment the committee members said they felt the property owners should be given their choice of the two towns. Final decision, however, will have to be given by the Legislature.

The Hyattsville committee is composed of Councilmen Robert C. Meredith and Robert T. Plitt. They will confer with Councilmen William C. Wedding and I. N. Goodwin, of Riverdale.

Sir Herbert to Speak.

Sir Herbert Ames, former financial director of the League of Nations secretariat, will address the University of Maryland student body today on "The Italo-Ethiopian Conflict." The lecture will be given at 11:30 a. m. at the university auditorium.

The future of the University of Maryland rests upon its ability to return real dividends to the taxpayers of the State, H. C. Byrd, acting president of the university, told the closing session of the annual extension service conference yesterday. The conference was held at College Park.

"It may be in the development of a better method of growing potatoes, a more modern way of housing cattle, making the home a better place in which to live, or in carrying the finer knowledge of government in economics or history to those who desire to improve themselves in these fields," he said.

Dr. Frank B. Bomberger, president of the Baltimore Bank for Cooperatives, in an address on "A Permanent System of Farm Credit," declared that "Agriculture suffers more from a lack of intelligent use of credit than it has ever suffered from too much credit."

He emphasized that Agriculture required special types of credit that are different from those that are adapted to the needs of industry and commerce, and described the types of credit available through the Federal Farm Credit Administration.

School Name Endorsed.

A resolution to name the Prince Georges Grade School, at Takoma Park, the J. Enos Ray School was adopted at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association held Monday night at the school on Ray road. The resolution will be presented to the Prince Georges County Board of Education for approval.

Mrs. C. M. Thomsen, president, announced that a card party for the benefit of the school will be held Friday, January 17, at 8 p. m. at the school, with Mrs. Ralph Brown in charge. The program at the meeting consisted of songs by Miss Dorothy Hobbs and readings by Mrs. D. C. Gordon.

The association is endeavoring to have Woodland avenue paved. Mrs. Thomsen stated that a committee would soon appeal to the town council for the improvement of the road which is now almost impassable.

Bank Clerk Mate Sues Heiress

Frank Spencer Meador, young San Antonio bank clerk, and Anne Gould Meador, of New York's railroad Goulds, whom he asked to divorce yesterday in Texas. The couple, shown after they eloped on Christmas night, 1934, have been separated for nearly a year.

Clerk-Heiress Romance Reaches Divorce Court

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 14 (AP).—The romance of the struggling young bank clerk and the pretty railroad heiress drifted from separation to a divorce court today.

The bank clerk, Frank Spencer Meador, of a Texas ranch family, sought court action to sever marriage ties with dark-eyed Anne Gould Meador, of New York's railroad Goulds.

He blamed the difference between San Antonio's "limited social life" and New York's gay whirl for the split-up—as well as reports picturing him as "a Cinderella man."

Rep. Green Moves To Impeach Judge

By the Associated Press.

Representative Green (Democrat), Florida, yesterday demanded the impeachment of Federal Judge Halstead L. Ritter, of the southern district of Florida.

In a petition submitted to the House, Green charged Ritter with "high crime and misdemeanor" and asked for his impeachment and removal from office.

Earlier in the day, the House Judiciary Committee adopted a majority sub-committee report recommending against the impeachment.

The majority report by Chairman Miller (Democrat), Arkansas, as well as the minority report, were made public last night, but the full committee delayed final action.

The investigation was one of several made by the committee in connection with bankruptcy and receivership handling in Federal courts.

Maxwell Girl's Counsel to Ask Re-Trial Today

School Teacher Convicted in Patricide Pins Hope on New Evidence.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Jan. 14.—Attorneys for Edith Maxwell tonight completed their plan of the legal campaign which they hope will result tomorrow in a new trial for the mountain girl who faces a 25-year term in prison for the alleged killing of her father.

The 21-year-old school teacher, who is confined in the Wise County Jail, was in a hopeful mood today and awaits with eager anticipation the ruling of Circuit Court Judge H. A. W. Skeen, who will decide whether she will have the opportunity to tell her story to another jury or carry her appeal to a higher court.

The prejudice which existed against Edith among the mountain people seems to have abated somewhat. Citizens interviewed on the streets of Wise are willing to admit that perhaps a mistake was made when they convicted the girl of killing her crazed father with a slipper when she resisted an attack.

A batch of evidence, the nature of which has not been disclosed, has been assembled by Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, who was retained by The Post, and upon which the defense bases its greatest hope for the new trial.

Tends to Show Natural Death.

This evidence, generally speaking, tends to show that Trigg Maxwell did not die from the blows inflicted by Edith during the night of terror in their mountain home, but that death was the result of natural causes.

So hopeful is Edith that she will get a new trial that she has made a "date" with attorneys to take her to the moving picture show tomorrow night in nearby Norton.

"I feel that Judge Skeen is going to help me," said Edith, who is still in high spirits in spite of her imprisonment for nearly six months in the old jail house.

Her imprisonment has not dimmed her sense of humor for she jocularly refers to her cell as her "apartment" and apologized because she could not invite her attorneys and a Post reporter to dinner.

Though there is plenty of curbstone opinion that a new trial will be ordered, the defense attorneys are not overly optimistic. Their principal objective in moving for the new trial is to build up a case that will lead to victory when and if it is considered by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Two Violations Claimed.

At the conference tonight, the attorneys decided that Mr. Smith would argue the criminal aspects of the case, while M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, Va., will argue the contentions that involve alleged violation of Edith's constitutional rights.

The constitutional questions involved are that the Virginia statute, which forbids women the right to sit on grand jury and trial juries is contrary to the U. S. Constitution, and secondly, that the indictment upon which she was convicted did not inform her of the charge against her, contrary to the Constitutions of the United States and the State of Virginia.

Defense attorneys were spending tonight poring over law books in order to take advantage of every legal loophole that yet remains in order to prevent the execution of the 25-year sentence.

In support of their arguments for a new trial the defense is expected to show that Trigg Maxwell died from apoplexy or heart trouble, induced by his heavy drinking and the rage into which he whipped himself on the night of his death last July 21.

Affidavits have been obtained to show that he complained of heart ailments, and that two days before he died, he was rejected as an insurance risk because of a bad heart. Defense attorneys have also obtained evidence that at least a half-dozen male members of the Maxwell family have died suddenly from apoplexy and heart ailments in the last few years.

Maxwell Defense Fund.

Previously acknowledged	$815.08
Yesterday's contributions:
Mrs. Emma S. Booth	1.00
Eleanor and G. W. Booth	1.00
E. A. P.	.10
Total	$817.18

Mrs. Thomas Elected.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Pearl Thomas was elected and installed most excellent chief of Columbia Temple, No. 13, Pythian Sisters, here last night. Other officers installed included Mrs. Lillie Tederick, excellent senior, and Mrs. Anna Burkhardt, mistress of finances.

A Delegate For The District.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the suggestion made recently in The Post that the District be permitted to elect a delegate to the House of Representatives. A number of local officials have expressed approval. Senator Vandenberg has introduced a bill to effectuate a similar proposal and that measure has been indorsed by the Piney Branch Citizens Association.

When Senator Vandenberg's bill comes up for discussion a number of amendments may be found advisable. In its present form it would permit one of the District Commissioners to sit as a delegate for the disfranchised Capital City in the House. That arrangement would be far less desirable than the election of a delegate to represent the people of Washington. An elected delegate would be on much the same footing as other Congressmen, except that he would be denied a vote. A local Commissioner, being an appointed official, might be less likely to champion the cause of the District against all odds.

Moreover, the Commissioners are already under pressure from their duties as executive heads of the local government. They would have little time to spend in Congress, even if the confusion of functions were theoretically desirable. What is needed is a full-time legislator who can follow every bill through the House and acquaint that body with the reasons for its enactment. If such an official were elected, his platform would give the Commissioners as well as Congress valuable guidance as to the wishes of the community.

Chairman Norton of the House District Committee does not seem to be impressed by the plan of Senator Vandenberg. The conduct of the House during its first District day of this session, however, cogently illustrates the need for more adequate and persuasive presentation of the District's case on the floor of that body. Bills to permit child performers to appear on the stage under supervision and to establish more stringent qualifications for lawyers were voted down, apparently because of the misinformation disseminated about them. In situations of this sort, which arise on almost every District day, a legislative representative of Washington could render very useful service.

Still At The Throttle.

William Gillette is treading the boards again! But it is typical of the white-haired actor that he does not call his reappearance a "farewell tour" or give out lengthy interviews on the old firehorse theme. Nor is he simply lending the glamour of his name to a walk-on part devised by some enterprising producer. On the contrary, John Golden, according to the dignified program announcement, "has the honor to present America's Most Distinguished Actor." And Charles Coburn, who was Old Bill in "The Better 'Ole;" Brandon Tynan, of Trilby fame; John Blair, noted portrayer of Ibsen roles, and Isabel Irving, associate of Augustin Daly and Charles Froham, are listed as the "supporting cast." Gillette, having passed fourscore years, is still fulfilling every actor's ambition in being billed above the play and the other players.

William Gillette's career has all the ingredients of a typical old actor's tale. Childish plays surreptitiously produced in a hay loft; family opposition to his theatrical leanings; odd jobs in stock companies; study of stagecraft and technique—these were the stepping stones which proved to be milestones on his way to success. His personal life he always held to be strictly his own affair and he set about making the best of it with as much fervor as he exercised in working out his most exacting role. Refusing to let his declining years limit him to scrapbook boundaries, he speeds through the countryside with the greatest of ease over a three-mile train track erected on his estate.

Almost coincident with Mr. Gillette's return is Leslie Howard's announcement that he intends retiring from the stage. To an actor of 81 years, who is still receiving star billing, Mr. Howard's decision to rest on his oars at 43 must seem not only premature, but the rash action of a callow youth. For after delighting two generations of playgoers, the grand old man is still going strong. And whether at the throttle of his miniature train or on the stage of a modern theater, William Gillette has amply proved that he can take both curve and cue with all the dexterity of an up-to-date, streamlined model.

In A False Perspective.

The Nye committee's investigation of various public and private activities in the early days of the World War is being conducted in an atmosphere very different from that which then existed. Determination to learn from the experience of the past is highly laudable. But without some comprehension of the conditions which prompted policy and action in 1914 and 1915, conclusions applied to problems of today may be completely misleading.

When war broke out in Europe the problem of American financing was not how to extend credit to foreign purchasers of munitions or even foodstuffs. The problem that then confronted this country was how to pay its foreign debts, due and becoming due in large amounts. Among these obligations, for instance, was a maturity of over sixty million dollars payable in London by the City of New York. How to settle that obligation of New York City was a problem not only of raising the money at home, but also of transferring the funds from dollars into pounds. The fact that the pound rose in August, 1914, to a price of seven dollars seems to have been entirely overlooked by the Nye committee. Only in December, 1914, did the dollar reach par of exchange.

Our problem then was how to export enough goods—raw materials, munitions, foodstuffs, or anything else—to pay our debts, and bring down the disturbing premium on the pound or, stated otherwise, the discount on the dollar. Export of gold was one possibility, but, again so different from today, a heavy gold export would have been disturbing to our money market at the beginning of the fall crop-moving period. It would have tightened interest rates and made money scarce for the harvesting and marketing of our crops all over the West and South.

Alternatively, exports of American products were highly desirable in the public interest of our country, then a debtor nation. And when exports began to move in volume the public, or at least all those who knew anything about the situation, breathed a sigh of relief. What is now laboriously and vindictively depicted as a form of crime was then regarded as national salvation.

Also forgotten is the fact that the outbreak of war closed the stock and security markets all over the world, including the United States. Europe held vast quantities of our bonds and shares. We did not dare to open our stock and bond markets to relieve the credit strain entailed by their closing until the exports began to flow in volume. It was well into the early months of 1915 before the volume of exports permitted and justified the reopening of the security markets in the United States.

Employment of labor was another fundamental in the situation which is now ignored. As exports of manufactured goods and foodstuffs rose, financial conditions improved and unemployment was curtailed. As foodstuffs moved to Europe our farmers began to spend for much needed necessities, thus solidifying industrial employment.

Of course the price of wheat went up almost immediately after the declaration of war. In certain parts of the country this first effect was stimulating, but the stimulus was purely speculative until it was backed by the export demand and the financing thereof which made the demand effective. Cotton in the South dropped from 12 cents down to 5 and was unsalable for some months. Only when the financial situation could be straightened out by bank credits at home and abroad did cotton prices begin to rise. Probably there have been few greater periods of distress in the South than in the period from August to October, 1914. The buy-a-bale movement was even helped by President Wilson himself.

Foreign trade, wicked as it is now considered, in 1914-15 spelled escape from disaster. The alternative of subsidizing distressed groups by continuous deficit financing was beyond the sober reasoning of those distant days. It is high time for the Nye committee to get its inquiry in correct perspective and to cease attempting to reconstruct the actions of 1914 in the light of the psychology of 1936.

Deplorable Precedent.

The Senate bonus bill, as approved by the Finance Committee yesterday, carries irresponsible law-making to a new level of legislative ineptitude. It actually offers a substantial reward to veterans who have failed to meet their obligations to the Government, while it would penalize those who have taken their contractual agreements seriously.

Veterans who have borrowed on their adjusted compensation certificates and failed to pay interest since September 30, 1931, would have unpaid interest canceled. The sums thus deducted from their debts to the Government would be equivalent to outright gifts, aggregating $263,000,000. On the other hand, the veterans who have conscientiously met their interest obligations would be penalized, for interest already paid would not be refunded. Apparently the authors of this bill have proceeded on the assumption that a casual attitude toward obligations freely entered into should be rewarded by the United States Government.

This unprincipled legislation follows on the heels of the gross discrimination against willing process-tax payers, which seems inevitable under the recent Supreme Court rulings. Those who refused to pay, except to court depositories, will have their taxes returned to them, while those who did not question the law apparently have no practical means of redress.

The demoralizing influence of such penalties upon honest co-operation with the Government can scarcely be overemphasized. Its effect upon homeowners having contracts with the HOLC, to cite only one instance, may be disastrous. Its encouragement to tax evasion is apparent. The Senate may well ponder the far-reaching consequences of the act before it votes to reward American citizens who have failed to meet their obligations to the Government.

Impacts Upon The Budget.

The approach to a balanced budget, which President Roosevelt so confidently announced last week, is rapidly changing into a disorderly retreat. One large source of revenue has been cut off by the Supreme Court's invalidation of the processing taxes, and probable expenditures are mounting up to a new pinnacle as Congress rushes to appease various groups demanding special benefits on the eve of an election. When the session closes the budget message may be chiefly interesting as further evidence of unwarranted executive optimism.

In the Senate, Administration leaders are smilingly indorsing a bonus bill involving an ultimate cost of nearly $2,500,000,000. The Finance Committee chairman, Senator Harrison, regardless of the President's demand that unbudgeted outlays be covered by new revenues, is still confident that new taxes will not be required. Apparently he is so absorbed in gratifying the veterans' lobby that he has given little heed to the rising demands for another enormous relief fund and the cloud which the AAA decision has left over the Treasury.

Likewise the committee of mayors, pleading for a new appropriation of $2,340,000,000 to keep the WPA operating at top speed, seem to have given no thought to the simultaneous drives of the bonusites and farmers. It is worthy of note that this relief program alone would expand the deficit beyond that estimated for the current year, thus reversing Mr. Roosevelt's gentle "approach" to a balanced budget. If Congress surrenders to the mayors, as it has done to the veterans and is likely to do again when the farmers present their case, the deficit for 1937 may well prove a record-breaker.

Farm organizations seem to be no more perturbed over this situation than the other lobbying groups encamped at the Capitol. Processing taxes are dead, but these agencies are nevertheless pressing for acceptance of a new AAA that would distribute approximately $500,000,000 annually in the farm belt. Moreover, there is talk of meeting the "moral obligations" of the Government under the invalidated law, although no revenue for that purpose is in sight.

These impacts upon the budget are the more devastating because groups seeking benefits out of the Treasury are being allowed to draft and sponsor their own legislative proposals. In adopting the veterans' lobby bill the House openly acknowledged their subordination to a powerful lobby by naming the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans, and saying that:

> Whereas, said organizations have united upon this measure to carry into effect their said resolutions;
> Therefore, be it enacted, etc.

Agricultural leaders, some of whom share responsibility for drafting the unconstitutional AAA, are once more shaping a program for Congressional ratification, apparently with little more regard for the basic law than they showed originally. So long as private groups are thus permitted to formulate legislation, executive budgets will be necessarily futile.

If the bonus, new farm subsidies and vast outlays for work relief can be justified at all, it is only as integral parts of a carefully devised program of expenditures. Seducing Congress by devious methods, wholly unrelated to the executive budget, they threaten seriously to undermine the national finances. Unless President Roosevelt is willing to follow the slippery trail to bankruptcy, against which he has issued such eloquent warnings, a supplementary budget message apprising Congress of the dangers in the present situation is strongly in order.

Appeal By Air.

Henry P. Fletcher misses his cue in responding to the refusal of both major radio broadcasting companies to sell the Republican national committee time for a series of skits dramatizing the issues of the coming Presidential campaign. Instead of meeting the well-reasoned arguments of the radio executives with the unproven cry of "unwarranted censorship," Mr. Fletcher might have made a telling point by taking up their inconsistency in explaining that "appeals to the electorate should be intellectual and not based on emotion, passion or prejudice." Lately, the air has been burdened with Democratic appeals of the latter variety.

For example, the Postmaster General on Monday used a hook-up of 13 stations to spread the assertion that American business is dominated by "a small coterie of unprincipled brigands" and "self-professed gangsters" who are "bent on destruction." In the field of passion and emotion Mr. Farley's allusions to the "privileged class" is noteworthy. He could speak with feeling for, as a Cabinet officer and chairman of the reigning political party, he unquestionably occupies one of the most privileged positions in the entire country.

Now that the AAA has had his day in court, would you call it the Cripple-A?

The blue eagle is officially dead, but its ghost still walks every pay day.

Letters To The Editor.

Where East Meets West.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently on the same evening two contrasting public performances were given in Washington; the one, an all-Wagner program at Constitution Hall, the other, in the shadows of the Arts Club Auditorium, a lecture on Chinese poetry by Mr. Tai Jen, Chinese poet and scholar.

In Wagner we find portrayed the tragedies, flamboyant loves, infelicities of the gods of Scandinavian mythology. Virile emotion through complexities and sonority of sound, singers struggling to be heard above the cacophony of orchestra.

In contrast, a modest Chinese scholar and poet, young, interesting, the polish of Harvard showing in repression of manner and refinement of diction, reading quietly and simply from the Chinese poets of the early Christian era, or reciting modestly his own poetry. The poems, in the original, were frequently given with the fascinating effect of musical chanting. The translations unfolded the inner moods of nature, running waters, flower fragrance, of love that is gentle, of friendships that are fine and will endure.

It is where East meets West. The Wagner program was acclaimed with noisy enthusiasm. For the sacred, we bow the head. Nearly 2,000 years ago. Have we advanced?

An Indirect Voice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We wonder if the author of the letter, "Laws Must Be Constitutional," is aware of the fact that the members of the Supreme Court are placed on the bench by the men whom the people of this country send to the Capitol. Were he acquainted with the functions of the Federal Government he would know that the President, with the approval of the Senate, appoints the members of the Supreme Court as vacancies occur. For this reason, their rulings are indirectly "the voice of the people."

Were he acquainted with the functions of the Supreme Court, he would know that the members are not concerned with politics, that they do not make the laws, but that they merely act as referees governed by rules of precedent by which they decide the constitutionality of the laws. For this reason, their decisions are based upon constitutional provisions, straightforward thinking, and unbiased opinions, and these decisions should be unreproachable by those unfamiliar with our Constitution.

A Traffic Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am much interested in your effort to discover why many who understand traffic rules are selfish and foolish enough to disregard them.

Lack of training in law observance that exists in many homes and schools may account for some of this. Prisons are full of those who similarly thought themselves superior to control.

One traffic danger that is little stressed is the sudden stopping at street corners, at night, when a motorist is trying to read unfamiliar street names. This is caused by the bad light arrangement on the lampposts here. Instead of falling upon the lettering, lights blaze out above it entirely obscuring what should be legible.

Dislikes Others' Opinions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading The Post ever since I was old enough to understand print, and I have respected your points of view, but I can't see how any man with any intelligence or understanding of the principles of our Government can do anything but laugh at the stupid, inane and childish opinions that you have printed in the course of the last two days under the heading "AAA Decision" in your letter columns.

If any one of these "intelligent" people should so desire I believe that I can arrange matters so that he or she could have a look at the act which he or she has so scathingly condemned and criticized. What right has a plumber to criticize an operation or a politician an engineering project? What is a person doing, raving about something of which he obviously knows nothing, but making a complete jackass of himself?

It is a very useless gesture for a person to undertake the remaking of humanity, but when one listens to the bleating of sheep and the lowing of cattle and the letter written by the average know-it-all to be published in a newspaper which supplies a source of current events to a supposedly clear thinking group of subscribers, one is inclined to wonder if there is such a thing as rationalism in the universe.

League Is Too Lenient.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To my way of thinking the Italians are being handled too considerately by the League. Sanctions have not been swift enough nor severe enough. All European nations should make a League fully understood by all. Just what would befall any nation that made war on an innocent neighbor? The punishment should be instant and severe; no time given the intruder to "dig in." They should be instantly boycotted, absolutely, and made to feel they are outside the bounds of Christian civilization.

If the citizens of the boycotted nations were sufficiently pinched, they might be persuaded to hand over to the world police the tyrant that was responsible for their suffering. He might be used in the front trenches or used to mark the locations of the hospitals!

Borah, The Re-Dealer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Borah got a break the other day and he bid for the Presidency in 1936. Right now he stands out as the most likely person in the Nation insofar as popularity is concerned. He looks like the man to re-deal the New Deal.

If business desires to stop the New Deal as it is now going and if that same business, in order to reach the desired objective, is willing to make some concession to liberalism, Borah is the man.

Neutrality And Candor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One thing the President's message, in regard to our foreign relations, has made clear: Our neutrality in face of war menace abroad can be maintained only in connection with open avowal of the fact that the United States claims the right to entertain more friendliness toward some kinds of national programs abroad than to others; and that some of these programs put a strain upon our friendliness. Any pussyfooting about the position of our country on the issues of human rights and liberties must only foster a contemptuous presumption toward us on the part of governments that tend to disregard these rights within their own borders; it creates bad blood when at length their illusions about us must be dispelled.

The greatest danger of bad blood from misunderstanding and presumption is on our own borders. Our existing relations with the Mexican government are the rotten spot in our whole foreign policy. In our Mexican relations the issue of liberty of conscience is treated as wholly irrelevant. Any demand made by our citizens, even in Congress itself, to investigate officially the use made by the Mexican government of the protection given them by our embargo on arms to Mexican insurgents is systematically misrepresented as a move for "intervention."

Maudlin accentuations of "good will" toward the Mexican government, official or semi-official, continue to compromise the reserve and independence of our position as a Nation in a world situation which renders it ever more imperative that we be sparing and selective in our warmer friendships. How are Argentina and Brazil to value a "good neighbor" that can keep on saying to Mexico, "What are the Rights of Man between two affectionate governments?"

One O'Connor To Another.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I regret very much that Representative O'Connor has been annoyed by birth controllers—anonymous and otherwise. I am frequently annoyed by them myself. In fact, a good section of the electorate is being constantly annoyed by their grim determination to make the American baby Public Enemy No. 1.

Representative O'Connor has had no part in the recent discussions on the subject of no births and no self-control. His views on this vital topic are still unknown to me. If the distinguished member of Congress continues to identify himself, in future communications, as the Representative of New York's Sixteenth District, I am sure that even birth controllers will soon learn not to confuse the author with a native Washingtonian.

Drop In Living Costs?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Again the Supreme Court has come to the rescue of the people of the United States. Now we know that the various processing taxes have been removed (we know because the meat packers and the produce dealers and the majority of the papers have told us), and that now the price of potatoes, meat and almost everything else will drop in the next few weeks.

We all know the farmer has not received more than one-third of the increase in prices.

The Post Impressionist

Culture, Aged In The Wood.

Post Office, Wednesday.

IT isn't often nowadays—or nowanights—that the Post-Impressionist gets hold of a book which robs him of his repose. He has attained such a philosophical serenity that, if the murderer of old Sir Douglas has not been discovered by 11:30 p. m., the falsely accused hero will have to stay in jail until tomorrow evening. Yet yesterday we did pick up a volume which wrecked our record.

It was an innocent seeming 8-mo. affair of little over 100 pp. Its price, at the second-hand bookstall, was the price of posting a letter. The title-page reads:

"CATALOGUE of the Books belonging to the Madison Library Association. Published by Order of the Board of Directors. Madison, Ind. Printed at the Courier Job Office. 1856."

* * *

We sat up until the smallest hours, making an intensive survey of the contents.

* * *

Not because of an interest in Madison, Ind., for its own sweet sake. We had to look it up, and then all we could find out was that it is somewhere on the Ohio and is the county-seat of Jefferson County.

But we felt it safe to assume that Madison, Ind., was a typical town of America at that ancient date. And we did want to find out what—if anything—typical American townsfolk were reading when Pierce was President.

In the first place, we found that they were determined to read—and this in the face of certain difficulties. The catalogue is preceded by an "Historical Sketch," apparently from the pen of one Robert E. Lee, Recording Secretary, whereby we learn:

"The meeting with reference to the establishment of this Association was held in the Reading Room of the Madison Hotel, December 5, 1853. It was determined that vigorous efforts should be made for the establishment of a Public Library, the want of which was sensibly felt . . . The members of the committee were admonished by the history of the Associations for similar objects in our city that great care would be required, when so many causes for distrust were fresh within the recollection of all."

The Library was opened next year—with 1,500 volumes, a number which, in '56, had grown to 2,480. And the institution successfully "commended itself to the regard of those persons who sincerely desired to promote a healthy influence by the diffusion of knowledge."

* * *

How could it do otherwise? Within those cultured walls one might study undisturbed "Addresses on the Death of W. R. King"—who, we are ashamed to have to tell you, was William Rufus King, a Vice President of this Republic: in those rugged days Americans honored their seconds-in-command. On the wide and dustless shelves dedicated to biography were "The Memoirs of Leila Ada," those of Margaret Mercer, and the "The Autobiography of Anna Cora Mowatt."

* * *

Nor may you think that the stage was taboo in that small community. The works on the Drama did not begin and end with "Shakespeare, William, 8 vols." Congreve rubbed shoulders with T. N. Talford's "Tragedies," T. A. Buckley's translation of Aeschylus was next door neighbor to Joanna Baillie and "The Comic Dramas" of Maria Edgeworth.

* * *

There were a hundred volumes of poetry, indicating a similarly catholic taste on the part of Madison, Ind., and her compeers:

Homer and Hannah More; Milton and Barry Cornwall; Goldsmith, Scott, Coleridge, "The Golden Legend," "Maud," Bryant, bits of the Brownings, inevitably Pollock's "Course of Time," "Irish Girl and Other Poems by Mrs. Ellis" and something called "Vision of Hell, Purgatory and Paradise" and attributed to Dante—evidently not the translation by Louis How.

* * *

Who were the Dreisers and Lewises of those days? Effie Afton, Kneller Glen. What were the "American Tragedies" and "Doddsworths?" "Eventide" and "Hearts Unveiled." Oh, they read Fielding, Cooper and as much as had appeared of Dickens, Hawthorne and Thackeray! But they also read "Thaddeus of Warsaw" and the blood-curdling Gilmore Simms. It would have been absurd to expect to escape Grace Greenwood and Fanny Fern. Yet what unsung critic dared catalogue Irving's "Conquest of Granada" as fiction? What soul above buttons was it that purchased "Charles O'Malley" and "The Berber," or, admitting the Caudel Curtain-Lectures, flung wide those decorous doors to "Simon Suggs?"

* * *

And that's not the worst, or least surprising, of it. We moderns are entirely too prone to suppose that, because our great-grandparents read a good many prudish books, they never read any other sort. In 1856, this Free Library of Madison, Ind., housed William Wycherley, Boccaccio, Catullus and "Roxana."

The Post-Impressionist hopes that these works were not among the 275 contributed, according to the "Historical Sketch," by the "lady-members of the Ladies' Library."

Fair Enough

By

Westbrook Pegler

L'Affaire Stavisky

Paris, Jan. 14.

YOUR correspondent spent a quiet hour at the county courthouse the other day, attending the trial of Mme. Arlette Stavisky, the poor widow woman who is accused of having squandered her self-respect on a dishonest man.

Mme. Stavisky's husband was Monsieur Sacha Stavisky, a Russian boy who made good in France under the name of Serge Alexandre Stavisky. He ran a municipal pawnshop in the city of Bayonne and swindled citizens of France out of several hundred million francs one way and another.

Mme. Stavisky was a clothes model when they met and her chassis is still as symmetrical as it was in the day when she was winning prizes in elegance contests at French resorts. You will be able to read the story of her life in the United States in a short time, as her literary agents went calling from door to door recently, soliciting bids for her memoirs, and finally made a sale while she was still nominally on trial at the county courthouse.

Even before the trial entered its last week she was certain to go free because the prosecutor, with a chivalrous gesture and a not exactly hostile sweep of his eyes at the fair defendant, admitted that the Republic of France did not wish to imprison the po' little widow beyond the ten months which she had already spent in jail awaiting trial.

• • • •

MME. STAVISKY and 19 males were on trial simultaneosuly charged with receiving money from M. Stavisky which he had obtained from citizens of France by various means, all of them unlawful.

Among defendants were a retired general of the French army, a publisher, three editors, one of them colored, and three lawyers, one of them a former member of the Chamber of Deputies. From this it will be apparent that the corps of defendants was quite a representative gathering of the best elements of the French nation.

The retired army general, Bardi de Fourtou, not having given bail, was compelled to stay in the inclosure, along with several others in a similar predicament, with a policeman of the republican guard on each side of him. He is a little general with a sharp face and a sad look in his eyes.

Still, unlike Mr. "Sobbing Sam" Insull, who also was a master of men in his time and who presently came to a like situation in the Federal Building in Chicago, the late general did not shed a tear. He merely sat there blinking, between two uniformed policemen, thinking of the days when he used to issue snappy commands to the likes of the men sitting across the room in the jury box and wondering whether they would bear down on him now that they had their chance and, if so, how hard.

• • • •

THE attorneys for the defense were now taking turns at explaining just how each of the unfortunate defendants happened to be placed in a false position through an ill-advised trust in that rogue, Serge Alexandre (born Sacha) Stavisky, the pawnbroker of Bayonne.

They would rise one by one, spread their arms, thus agitating the flowing sleeves of their billowing black kimonos, and purse their lips, forming those pear-shaped sounds which are the jewels of courtroom oratory. Their little white bibs fluttered as they heaved and swelled with their passion for justice and the gentlemen of the jury sat drowsing and scratching in their box across the room, wondering how much longer this sort of thing had to go on.

They had been in court since November 3 and had conducted a successful strike for a raise in pay from 15 francs, or $1, to 50 francs, or about $3.30, a day. Six men sat on the bench in scarlet robes, two of them with frowsy ermine trimmings, and occasionally one or another would rise and stroll outside for a while.

The courtroom was murky and dusty, even as a county court in the United States, with yellow lights faintly relieving the shadows, and the celebrated "Affaire Stavisky," which infuriated the French people to the point of revolution, was obviously approaching the point of a washout, after all.

L'Oncle Stavisky, the pawnshop keeper of Bayonne, was dead and buried, and so were those who fell under the fire of troops in the revolution. The widow, still fair and shapeley, plainly had no legitimate role in the cast of defendants, and there had been so much lying and double-crossing and such subtle dirty work behind the woodshed that by this time it seemed pretty plain that the principal conspirators had never even been indicted.

• • • •

THEIR procedure is different, but at heart the French have so much in commen with Americans that it is really no wonder Americans get crushes on France and feel as much at home in Paris as in New York, Chicago, [illegible], St. Paul or any other center [illegible] and corruption.

They fly into great furies over spectacular revelations and finally they permit lawyers to stall for delays and fumble up evidence until there is no hope of convincing the right man and very little chance of convicting an innocent goat by way of consolation.

Still, in l'Affaire Stavisky there is a note of humor, somehow distinctly French, which has never been equalled in l'Affaire Tammany Hall or l'Affaire Insull at home. The greatest scandal in France since the Dreyfus case, involving a bloody uprising in the Place de la Concorde, emerged from a clutter of second-hand banjos, boxing gloves and binoculars in the pawnshop of l' Oncle Stavisky the Russian at the sign of the three balls in the bush league town of Bayonne.

Parks or Parking?

The Time Seems To Have Come To Choose Between Flora, Fauna And The Statues And Dirksen's Dime-A-Car Proposal.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

REPRESENTATIVE DIRKSEN stuck his neck way out when he suggested the other day that two of the National Capital's down town parks be converted into dime-a-car parking lots. Immediately the professional guardians of the flora and fauna of the District ruffled their feathers and uttered angry words. Several persons telephoned this department and vehemently denounced Mr. Dirksen for what they gratuitously described as his gross materialism and wanted to know what the poor squirrels and pigeons would do in the event his nefarious scheme went through.

When your correspondent intimated that the possible elimination of these two pests was, in his mind, the only saving grace to the Congressman's proposal the resultant retort nearly short-circuited the telephone and made him feel very sad indeed.

Nevertheless, regardless of the fate of the wild life, there seems to be a pretty widespread resentment whenever anyone has the temerity to do as Mr. Dirksen did. If it isn't the wild life, it's the flowers; if it isn't the flowers, it's some historical association, and there are always the statues to be remembered.

Just the other day some sentimentalist was writing in letters to the editors suggesting places, besides the bottom of the Potomac, where some Roman and quite useless columns from a public building might be preserved.

In another city, when we were very young, they tore down an old courthouse which had columns. For months a controversy raged over what to do with them. Finally the city had them carted out to a park where they lay in the mud for most of our adolescence until they eventually were rediscovered by a city council which had several contractors in its membership. Times being dull, the columns were eventually raised at the entrance to the park, at great expense. They look very lonely and foolish there and most visitors wonder about them until you quell their curiosity by saying they were erected by Leif Ericson and the Norsemen in the pre-Columbus era.

THERE is plenty to object to when told that Washington is a city of magnificent distances, or whatever the phrase is, but the parks are not among them. If, for example, some Congressman suggested the elimination of the State, War and Navy Building on the ground that its archaic architecture has an unwholesome effect upon the morale of the diplomats, there undoubtedly would be little objection, although those ancient cronies who meet every so often in the old firehouse would denounce it as a Red plot and adopt resolutions asking the school children to save their pennies, so that it might be preserved at the Smithsonian. But a park is a different matter——

Undoubtedly these rustic spots scattered throughout the Capital serve to keep innumerable Government clerks from becoming too nostalgic for their rustic bailiwicks, even if you never do see a cow grazing on the public grass. This is good for morale, but it was suggested yesterday by one Washingtonian that the city fathers are missing a bet by not utilizing the parks to a better purpose. He expressed the opinion that platforms be raised therein and that permanent speaking permits be issued to such distinguished gentlemen as Gen. Fries and Mr. Sullivan, who would be allowed to use them at will. The idea being that no newspaper was ever known to cover the soap box addresses of Hyde Park or Boston Common, where angry gentry for generations have let off steam. If the idea were carried out here, there could be no hint of suppression of free speech and only the idle and noon-time lunchers would be annoyed by the unrecorded utterances of the reformers.

ONLY 600 automobiles would find 10-cent parking space if trees were cut down and the squirrels driven to find refuge in the pansy beds of Lafayette Park, which was not included in the plan of the Gentleman from Illinois. This would hardly make a noticeable dent in the interminable lines of freely parked cars which Washingtonians long since became convinced were as much a permanent part of the city as the streets themselves. If our Congressional planners of the City Beautiful are really annoyed at the wide open spaces of McPherson and Franklin Parks there are at hand any number of other ways to fill them up that would serve quite as useful purposes as turning them into outdoor garages.

For instance, all the statues of forgotten Army officers who could not be identified off-hand by the first ten taxpayers, might well be gathered in the space between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, along with all the brass cannon and eagles in bas relief. Then, if a high and knotless board fence were erected around them, a 10-cent charge might be made to this chamber of municipal horrors which, we have no doubt, would bring the city far more revenue from tourists alone than the parking plan of Mr. Dirksen. It would also help relieve traffic, for it has been estimated that hundreds of autoists, suddenly glancing up at, say, the granite figure of a great hero in full retreat upon a charging stallion, have been so startled by the sight that serious disaster has resulted.

Perhaps this idea could be combined with the other one. The statues could be placed in a huge semicircle with the speakers' stand in the center. Then whenever some indignant citizen wanted to complain about anything he could do so to the silent statuary without bothering a soul. And if he had some really useful suggestion for the betterment of the District, such as lowering the tax rate, the result would be just the same as if he made his speech in Congress.

Bar to Seek Code Of Trial Etiquette

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—The American Bar Association tonight made its first definite move toward the establishment of a code of etiquette for lawyers, press and public at future trials.

The organization's executive committee spent two days considering a lengthy criticism of the "atmosphere" surrounding Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial and then announced it had voted to:

"Create a special committee authorized to invite the co-operation of other organizations for the purpose of formulating standards which will be designed to avoid prejudicial publicity and conduct in connection with judicial and quasi-judicial proceedings.

President William L. Ransom, who had urged action to prevent recurrence of the "shocking incidents" which "characterized" Hauptmann's trial for the murder of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's baby, will appoint the special committee.

Hospital Radio Talk Aids Roosevelt Ball

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, president of the Board of Lady Visitors for Children's Hospital, described the work of the hospital in a radio broadcast last night in connection with the President's Birthday Ball on January 30. The hospital will receive 70 per cent of the funds derived from the ball. The broadcast was arranged by "Radio Joe" Kaufman.

Col. Edward G. Bliss, chairman of the program committee for the ball, outlined plans for an elaborate program at a meeting in Commissioner George E. Allen's office.

Col. Bliss announced that efforts would be made to get indorsement of Washington's business associations in order that advertisements in the program could be solicited at once. He announced that H. Donald Sennemann has accepted the post as assistant chairman of the committee, and Earl Nash and George E. Keneipp as vice chairman.

The Once Over

H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Cross-Examination.

("A seaman on a naval flagship stuck up an officer and attempted to rob the ship's safe at sea."—News item.)

Q.—Now, then, why did you want to rob a warship?

A.—It must have been a desire to do something original.

Q.—If detected, what was your idea about flight?

Q.—Did a robbery of that kind have any particular advantage?

• • • •

Q.—As a seaman on the battleship, didn't you know you would be recognized?

A.—Yes. That's about the only way a seaman on a battleship could get recognition.

Q.—What made you try to rob the ship?

A.—I dunno. The sea had been very quiet for weeks and I guess I wanted a roll.

Q.—What did you intend to do with the money?

A.—I thought I'd take a sea voyage.

Q.—But you were taking a sea voyage.

A.—I forgot about that.

• • • •

Q.—Were you ever guilty of any other crimes at sea?

A.—Oh, yes, I specialized in them.

Q.—Why?

A.—It was clean work and kept me out in the fresh sea air.

Q.—What do you consider responsible for your behavior?

A.—It may have been bad company.

A.—Well, I once knew "Porpoise" McQuillotash.

Q.—Who was "Porpoise" McQuillotash?

A.—He's the fellow who was supposed to do the lowest form of criminal work. He was a sneak thief on a submarine.

• • • •

Q.—Did you have any other evil acquaintnaces?

A.—There was "Shark" Mezookis.

Q.—What did he do?

A.—He once tried to stick up an entire fleet in action. He also specialized in stealing admiral's launches. Then there was "Gunner" Stoople. You must have heard of him.

Q.—What about him?

A.—He used to steal armored cruisers, change the plates and resell them to the fleet.

Q.—How did you come to join the Navy?

Q.—How?

Polish Decree Demands Equality for Citizens

Warsaw, Poland, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Senate approved tonight a presidential decree by which Poland will apply retaliatory measures against countries in which her citizens are not treated equally with the treatment of those countries' citizens in Poland.

The decree may be applied to Germany on account of the treatment of Polish Jews there, and to Czechoslovakia, where the Poles complain of discrimination against them.

Poles owning real estate in Germany complain they cannot get revenue from it, while German landowners in Poland have been able to remit funds to Germany freely.

Iran and Iraq Reach Truce on Boundary

Geneva, Jan. 14 (AP).—League of Nations officials announced today a settlement of the frontier dispute between Iraq (Mesopotamia) and Iran (Persia) has been virtually reached, principally through the good offices of President Eduard Benes, of Czechoslovakia and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, of Britain.

The dispute was withdrawn from the Agenda for the January 20 session of the League council. The question had been brought before the League by Iraq, which charged its southwest Asian neighbor, Iran, with aggression.

Tobacco Market Reopens.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Jan. 14.—The Danville tobacco market has resumed operations after a month's pause, with nothing in the prevailing price scales to reflect influence by the AAA decision. Prices paid here are approximately what they were early in December. The season is expected to close here early in February.

Roosevelt Asks Parley to Spur Home Building

Low-Income Groups Form 90% of Prospective Buyers, He Says.

Attacking again the long-standing and difficult housing problem, President Roosevelt yesterday revealed he will call a conference shortly to devise means of helping small-income families build homes.

This announcement at the White House press conference coincided with the release of the third brochure of the home-building program of the Committee for Economic Recovery, which presented to the President a 12-point program crystallizing methods to relieve the acute housing shortage.

The President, who had not as yet closely examined the committee's report, said that there was no plan in sight to meet the situation pending a talk on the problem with Federal housing heads and housing experts. The seriousness of this situation he pictured by estimating that at least 90 per cent of the people who need better housing come within the income group earning $2,500 a year or less and are thus unable to pay for houses costing $5,000 or more.

Urges Definite Plan.

The President expressed hope that a definite plan would appear, and also hope that industry can find the answer to the problem of mass production of new homes.

He said that reports indicated considerable progress was being made in the construction of homes and apartment houses for persons with incomes permitting building of $5,000 or more valuable dwellings.

The President indicated that difficulty was being experienced in getting a better housing program going without Federal aid of some kind.

Federal assistance formed part of the recommendations of the committee for economic recovery, also, with aid in financing a home-building industry to come from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Loan Bank Board.

Would Seek Advice.

Advisory assistance would also be asked of the Department of Commerce.

The committee's 12-point program in the new brochure, which reports on methods of obtaining the housing objectives outlined in two previous issues, is based on a consideration of the emergency shown by various surveys. The intensity of this emergency is illustrated significantly by one example: that in New York City approximately 2,000,000 people live in quarters that were declared unfit about 36 years ago.

Coupling such figures as that with the assertion that between 35 and 40 million people are on, or near, relief through unemployment, the committee points out that huge blocks of capital are unemployed, that "Government credit is endangered by large deficits caused by this dual unemployment," and that "improper homes are at the root of many of our most serious social problems."

The first point of the program is that new building should provide for at least 750,000 homes yearly for the next ten years, with this figure based on minimum requirements only, and without consideration of the vast areas of obsolescent homes, and the great number of slum and overcrowded areas.

93 Per Cent "Neglected."

The second point stipulated that homes in the price range of $2,500 to $6,000 should be constructed, with emphasis on homes not over $4,000 in cost, in order "to serve the 93 per cent of our population who have always been neglected."

In construction requirements under this point the committee notes that more factory pre-fabrication of the parts comprising a house, larger concentrated volume, more efficiency in site construction, modern merchandising methods and readjustment of methods of land acquisition are needed.

The third point proposes the creation of a home-building industry, since there is none, by the promotion of home-building corporations in a national association with the development of planned communities from 200 to 2,000 homes shortly.

These projects would be financed by about $30,000,000 in debenture bonds to be underwritten by investment bankers and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Other points stress the development of labor relations so that labor receives a greater annual income with a lower unit cost to the home builder; that every nonessential cost to the home owner must be eliminated by co-operation among railroads, the home builder associations, the Department of Commerce and the major suppliers of materials; that excessive gross profits of home builders must be prevented, and that financing costs must be cut to the minimum, with facilities for cash payments of as low as 5 per cent available to the small-income families.

With an interest, including all service charges, held to 4½ per cent, with FHA Government-guaranteed mortgages made available at ¼ of 1 per cent of the declining balance, with the dramatization of the program to the public, the reorganization of governmental agencies so that the Department of Commerce undertakes promotion of home building and the home finance units of the Government are coordinated, the committee's program is logically carried out to these conclusions:

That the psychology of the home building program should be changed, with home building not tied in with emergency relief; that neighborhood, community and town planning are essential to the program; that private building should cover 85 per cent of the program, and that antiquated State and municipal laws which deter the home program must be changed.

Marriage Costs and Pork Prices Star in Republican Air Drama

First Political Play Broadcast From Station in Chicago Assails Many Phases of New Deal, Three Other Skits Planned by Illinoisans.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—The first of the Republican Party's dramatized political programs—aimed at the New Deal and designed to woo voters to the party's cause—was broadcast over Radio Station WGN tonight.

For a half hour verbal thrusts at "regimentation," "excessive taxation," crop control, the national debt and New Deal undertakings—interspersed with martial music and dramatic skits—went out over the air. The announced purpose of the innovation in the inter-party warfare was "to bring home the ill effect of the Government's policies on your life and mine."

Franklin D. Roosevelt was quoted as stating in his 1932 campaign:

"Stop the deficits."

An announcer declared the Administration's expenditures resulted in a $3,575,000,000 deficit on June 30, 1935; that the New Deal is spending $1.95 for each $1 collected; that the public debt totals $30,534,000,000.

"Do you know the national debt has a prior lien on everything you earn? The average man must pay $4.60 a week to the Government."

Smith, making only $22.50 a week, cancels the marriage plans.

The next skit shows citizen Brown paying Andy, the butcher, 15 cents a pound for pork roast in 1934. Eight months later the price has risen to 30 cents. The butcher explains:

"The Government has used the processing tax to destroy hogs and make meat more expensive."

In a breakfast nook sketch, Husband Jack is informed by Wife Jane that they can't afford bacon at 53 cents a pound. Year later they return to the table to eat bacon imported from Poland. The husband observes:

An announcer follows this up with the assertion pork consumption in the United States fell from six billion pounds in 1933 to four billion in 1935.

The program was the first of four scheduled for WGN. Thomas G. Sabin, director of the National Committee's Radio Division, was present. He planned to present the programs from independent stations after the two major networks declined to rent their facilities for "dramatized political skits."

The program was entitled "Liberty at the Cross Roads." It was financed and sponsored by the Republican National Committee and the Illinois Republican Citizens Organization.

AAA Payroll Snarl

of Agriculture Wallace "does not disclose sufficient facts," Comptroller General McCarl said he was unable to advise upon salary payments to AAA employes.

He suggested:

"If it is believed that all or certain of said matters are now for carrying on, and lawfully may be carried on in view of the decision of the Supreme Court, it is suggested that a detail statement thereof, including the methods of operation, etc., and the reasons why it is believed the decision of the court does not prohibit such carrying on, be submitted for decision as to the legal availability of such appropriation for uses accordingly."

Reply to Morgenthau.

In reply to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau relative to the 2,500 employes on AAA work and paid out of processing tax funds, McCarl held:

"To the extent the aggregate amount actually derived from such (processing) taxes is less than the aggregate of all expenditures, including transfers, from the fund set up under said section, plus the amount of the unexpended balance now in said fund, including the unexpended balance of amounts transferred from said fund . . . the moneys so advanced . . . were not appropriated and are not now available for any use whatsoever, and any unexpended balances of funds transferred to your department . . . are for returning to the general fund of the Treasury."

Some AAA workers are paid out of funds derived from processing taxes, collection of which was stopped immediately the Supreme Court decision was announced, but their number is negligible.

Demobilization Begins.

The agricultural administration's retrenchment program has been under way, in preliminary fashion, since the Supreme Court invalidated the crop reduction agency January 6. Only yesterday, however, was it divulged what steps will be taken in the demobilization program.

Correcting reports that the AAA has 1,600 employes on a temporary 90-day basis, Stedman pointed out that this figure was as of December 15, that in the interim 1,000 have been put on permanent status. Although they probably will be let out anyway, by leaving the "temporary" classification, they receive accrued leave privileges and stand a beter chance of being rehired for farm-relief work.

According to an announcement by the A. F. G. E., whose president, Claude E. Babcock, was in the delegation which conferred yesterday with Davis, the AAA employes who have civil service status will be certified to the Civil Service Commission within the next few days for the reemployment register.

Those let out in the demobilization program will get whatever accrued leave is due them, 15 days' notice and 30 days' furlough—a total of 45 days' employment status plus accrued annual leave.

Temporary workers slated for dismissal receive 15 days' notice but none of the other privileges.

Reductions among permanent personnel are expected to be by seniority, with possible exceptions in some of the higher grades. The A. F. G. E. group said Davis would recommend to the National Emergency Council that noncivil service employes be used in appointments to other emergency agencies and given the highest possible priority.

Whenever overtime situations develop in the skeletonized AAA offices, employes on furlough will be called in to meet the emergency.

Children Inoculated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boonsboro, Md., Jan. 14.—The health department today began immunitization in the elementary schools against scarlet fever following the discovery of three cases among children. All parents of children in the schools are being given an opportunity to have their children immunized.

Leaders Fear New Taxation At This Session

By the Associated Press.

Assertions that Congress may be unable to escape consideration of additional tax legislation at this session were sounded yesterday at the Capitol, widening a rift of opinion upon this point.

On the House side, Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, the Democratic leader, told newspapermen new tax legislation "may be inevitable." He did not elaborate.

On the other side of the Capitol, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, a member of the Finance Committee, asserted he felt the Supreme Court's scrapping of the AAA would require imposing of new levies. He declined to predict what form such taxes might take.

Tax Discussion Increases.

Others took directly opposite views. There was, however, a noticeable increase of private discussion of the subject as word spread that Secretary Morgenthau, appearing privately before a Senate Finance Committee bonus hearing, had reported that the Government might have to raise $11,300,000,000 in the next 17½ months. Of this $5,800,000,000 would be regular Treasury refunding.

Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, making particular reference to the bonus, reiterated to newsmen his previous prediction that no new taxes would be necessary. He spoke after listening to the Treasury Secretary's outline.

Representative Fuller (Democrat), Arkansas, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, where tax measures originate, likewise said he was convinced there would be no new taxes this year.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, remained non-committal. But an opportunity for the subject to be broached will crop up when the committee meets, probably late this week, primarily to consider filling vacancies on other House committees.

Would Not Be Surprised.

Asked whether he would be surprised if taxes were injected into the meeting, Doughton replied: "No, I wouldn't." Then he added:

"I wouldn't be surprised, however, if someone introduced a bill to change the hour of sunrise."

At least one of his committee colleagues, Representative Disney (Democrat), Oklahoma, has reached a conclusion that some sort of tax bill will emerge this session. After the Supreme Court ruling which will force return of $200,000,000 in impounded AAA processing taxes, he remarked that "some new tax bill" was "certain."

One of the Republican committeemen, Representative Knutson, of Minnesota, added that he thought it would be difficult to avoid more taxes this session. Asked how the Republicans would enjoy that from a political point of view, he said, "we certainly wouldn't shed any tears."

Mind Reader's Turban Undone To Find Secret

By Chanticleer.

Until this week, Prince Mogul was just another act for one young-man-about-town. Now the "prince" has the skeptic staring out of windows and lying awake nights. The young man (he shall be called Hal) was handed a piece of paper and a pencil on visiting Mogul, who has been entertaining the Shoreham's patrons for several weeks.

He was asked to write one question (and wrote two!), to tear the paper in bits and burn it. He did this, with his tongue in his cheek and his eyes roving about for some sort of mechanical trickery enabling Mogul to learn what his questions had been.

Without hesitation, the Prince answered the question, intelligently and thoroughly. Hal admits it will be some time before he knows how accurately. But after all, Mogul is not a seer. Rather he demonstrates there is such a thing as mental telepathy.

Hal still was skeptical. He looked about for mirrors. He suspected the turban over Mogul's ears as concealing ear-phones. So, Jules Mednick, who represents Mogul, obliged. He let Hal watch as the turban was removed and rewound! Then, just to prove there were no cards up the sleeve, the gentleman with the X-ray mind asked the subject to concentrate on an initial of a friend's name. Which Hal did. And at once Mogul named that letter.

A few moments later Hal was told of the gentleman from the Internal Revenue Bureau who has been a frequent visitor and who invariably writes his questions in German, French, Italian. Perhaps Spanish. And the results are the same. Mogul's talent is "mind-reading;" the words on paper are principally intended to fix the question definitely in the subject's mind.

Mogul also can be directed, or guided, in specific operations, so Carl Bonner, half of the Shoreham's singing duo, tells me. By sitting quietly, and concentrating, a person can direct the Prince—to the telephone to pick up a book, to a certain door. Carl was a skeptic, too. He invested an evening in learning that Mogul has a telepathic mind.

The Bonners—Carl and Leone—are becoming distinguished in their field for their long stay at the Shoreham. Vocalists they are—and billed for an indefinite stay. Dance teams, yes. But warblers are something else again. And do they like Washington? Listen, my friends, they just turned down a billing at New York's Hollywood.

That Gypsy floor show at the Rusisan Troika is sufficient evidence that you need not know a word of a Continental language to understand and appreciate the spirit of the production. The other night Pauline Achmatova smiled at the Troika's patrons as the orchestra swung into a tune—the name of which was wholly beyond understanding. And was it a love song? It was. From Karavieff to Marusia Sava and Momonoff—love flowed in waves over the room. All with actions and expressions.

And as he humorously puts it, Karavieff injects interpretations in excellent English. He dances in Russian or English, depending on the mood and the moment. It is Marusia, the contralto, who does the splendid job of bringing you into an understanding of a song by graceful gestures and vivacious facial expressions.

And don't miss, under any circumstances, "Bublichki," which at least is the euphonics of the Russian "buy my doughnuts" song.

Hittin' a few high spots: Monday night is "Lottery Night" at Maryland Club Gardens, with Jimmy Harris and his ork, Fran Trappe and his accordion, and Virginia Sims, warbler . . . Jimmy Santmyer presents Ray Nelson, the young fella with the heart appeal in his voice, Wardman Park's Dragon Room . . . Duncan Flapperettes held over at the Dude Ranch—with this week seeing the return of Ralph Garron waggling the Dude Ranch band baton.

Jack and Leo for intimate ditties, at the Mayfair Cafe of All Nations—and don't forget that a lot of those smart tunes are their own compositions . . . Jimmy Bright, formerly of the Club Habana, now highlighted in Leon Brusiloff's Madrillon Orchestra . . . Consuela Gonzales making herself very acceptable to the patrons at Matt Windsor's Club Volga Boatman in Russian cabaret with an oo-la-la.

Joseph and Ellen Corbett close two weeks of dancing at the Heigh-Ho tonight and will be succeeded by a little departure in Ol' Massa Pete Macia's floor billing—Grace Shannon, pianist, and Walter Doe, tap-dancing star late with Susan Hall . . . Dolores and Phillips lead the floor parade at the La Paree—and Dolores adds a hula that slays the customers; also the six Manhattan Flashes, featuring Fifi and Edna.

Maurice and Nadja are at the Lotus this week on their way into New York for a Broadway opening, backed up by Merrick and Allen and Lady Mei's Mannequins (now a Washington institution) . . . Sidney's Mayflower lounge band is having a bit of fun at the expense of radio's amateur hours this week . . . When Knott and Towne had to leave the Club Habana for Bermuda, Guy Scott walked into a mess of good luck—he obetained the favorites, Lucille and Linden. And Bert Granoff is present this week, featuring the smash hit, "Alone."

Around the Town With the Supper Clubs

On the Air Today

MESSRS. LOHR, PALEY AND FLETCHER are indulging in a flood of words these days over what undoubtedly is a fundamental phase of broadcasting: the responsibility of the radio station, or network, in selecting programs, whether talks or musical extravaganzas, whether sustaining or commercial.

The comparison of the broadcasting station and the newspaper, in this respect, is interesting. Occasionally someone points out that radio is entitled to the same "editorial" policies as the newspaper. In other words, a program presented to the radio station for broadcasting should be treated much as a piece of copy offered a paper. If the station wants it—well and good. If not, the privilege of rejection should be quite as proper as a rejection by an editor.

Others maintain, however, that the newspaper is invited to enter the home through placing of a subscription. Radio, on the contrary, sends its message into the heart of the family circle, whether welcome or not. Hence, the responsibility of selection is more finely drawn in the public interest in radio than through the news columns.

Aside from the more obvious violations of what constitutes "public interest" and good taste, which the radio broadcasting industry seems capable of ironing out as a matter of self-interest, radio seems to be far more susceptible to criticism. Radio has attempted to improve children's programs. Offensive commercial programs (notably medical preparations) have been censored. But in reaching a mass audience of millions, the voice of those who invariably are not pleased with this and that becomes loud and angry.

You name any creditable program now on the air, and in a short time I will find you listeners who complain about it.

Once in awhile the radio barons guess poorly. They decided against broadcasting the Will Rogers service. The public complained because it wasn't on the air.

A fair share of the public wants to hear the President's message to Congress; another portion complains because the President's talk reduces the choice of musical programs available for that hour. In 1935 hundreds of network hours were given over to governmental and Congressional talks. Your guess would be as good as mine to the percentage of persons who listen.

Radio, perforce, will "play ball" with all sides, all partisan angles. The audience as a whole will always take care of that, perhaps better than any one individual's lament.

Philips Lord's new "Gang Busters" series is inaugurated tonight at 10, WJSV. Now you can hear Lord as a New England "Seth Parker," and a few nights later as a leading character in a thrill-and-chills half hour, taken from the records of criminal law enforcement.

There will be two Fred Allens and Portlands at "Town Hall Tonight," WRC, at 9. The reason: Two of Allen's amateurs have elected to imitate the famous pair. Not bad, sitting back and hearing yourselves as others hear you.

Other highlights: Irene Beasley joins the "Rendezvous," WMAL, at 8, after an air absence of many months . . . Fannie Hurst, Sophie Tucker, Harry Richman and others in benefit show, WOL, at 3 . . . Senators Nye and Capper on observance of the Kellogg-Briand pact, WRC, at 5:45 . . . Peggy Cochrane, London music hall star, WRC, at 10 . . . A tone poem, "London Bridge Is Falling Down," described as baffling description, Chesterfield show, WJSV, at 9. J. H. H.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

THREE members of the Senate Civil Service Committee offer suggestions and recommendations for improving the Civil Service, as follows:

BAKER.

Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, who has long been a member of the committee and who has shown much interest in Civil Service affairs, says:

"There is constant warfare going on between those who believe that merit should prevail in making selections for public service, and those who believe that the selection should be wholly political. In my judgment, the merit system has been making progress during the past several years, and it will continue to make progress because it is right.

"There are imperfections in the administration of the laws, and imperfections in the laws themselves, but it would require too much time and space to point out particular defects. They should be met from time to time, and such progress should be made as can be made. One of the most important things at this time in connection with Government work is making merit the basis of securing and holding nearly all places in the work of the Government."

Senator Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont, says:

"I wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the work of the National Civil Service in connection with the fifty-third anniversary of the national civil service act. I heartily approve of the merit system, and you may be sure I shall be glad to co-operate in the future on civil service matters as I have in the past."

Senator Lynn Frazier, of North Dakota, says:

"I am glad to note that the American Federation of Government Employes is commemorating the fifty-third anniversary of the civil service act. The worst enemy of the civil service is politics, and I hope that feature can be eliminated from the act."

Harold Swanson, examiner, is reported to have tendered his resignation at Patent Office to enter the patent department of the Sylvania Industrial Corporation, New York.

Return From New York.

Members of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce who attended the recent meetings in New York of the American Statistical Association and the American Economic Society include Roy G. Blakey, M. Joseph Meehan, Donald C. Horton, Robert R. Nathan, Ernest A. Tupper, Clyde R. Chambers, and N. H. Engle.

"The Maya Breadnut in South Florida" is the title of an article in a recent number of "Science" by Dr. O. F. Cook, in charge of the Division of Cotton, Rubber and Other Tropical Plants, Bureau of Plant Industry."

Resources Committee Reports.

The advisory committee of the National Resources Board, consisting of Dr. W. B. Bell, Biological Survey; Lieut. Col. Glen E. Edgerton, Corps of Engineers; Arno C. Fieldner, Bureau of Mines; Elmer Higgins, Bureau of Fisheries; Thorndike Saville, National Resources Board; R. E. Tarbott, Public Health Service, and Abel Wolman, Maryland State department of health, recently submitted its report, which indicates that States are faced with increasing serious pollution of their waters, that insufficient effort is being made to protect public health and waterfowl and fish life from effects of domestic and industrial waste, and that many States are lacking in legislation to cope with existing conditions. The committee made recommendations along these lines.

Richard W. Hogue, jr., has been named as right-hand man to Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, succeeding F. R. Kirkman, who has resigned to join a San Francisco law firm.

Officials and Envoys Entertain at Dinners

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The official season with all its attendant entertaining is in full progress, and last night numerous diplomatic and official dinners occupied members of Capital society.

The Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Aranha entertained at one of a series of dinners they are giving this winter in the embassy on Massachusetts avenue. The ranking guests were the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay, who have been observing a period of official mourning for the late Princess Victoria, sister of the King. The other guests included the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Don Guillermo Patterson; the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the Minister of Portugal and Mme. di Bianchi, the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Breugel Douglas, Col. and Mrs. Charles Burnett, Maj. and Mrs. Maurice Gardner Holmes, former Representative and Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Thomas C. Dawson, the Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Lobo, Mr. George Abell, and the first Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Don Hector Leguizamon.

The Ambassador of China, Mr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, entertained at dinner last night in the embassy in honor of the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg.

Other Guests at Dinner.

The other guests were Associate Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, the Right Rev. and Mrs. James E. Freeman, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, the Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. T. K. Bewley, former Representative and Mrs. James M. Beck and Dr. and Mrs. James Brown Scott.

Up on Wyoming avenue the Minister of Siam, Phya Abhibal Rajamaitri, and his petite wife, entertained at another dinner, when their guests were the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Minister of Colombia and Senora de Lopez, the Assistant Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department and Mrs. Maxwell Hamilton, the Assistant Chief of the Protocol Division of the State Department and Mrs. Julius C. Holmes, the Third Secretary of the Legation, Mr. Snga Nilkamhaeng and Mr. Murray Sheehan, superintendent of the Siamese students in this country.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper were the guests in whose honor the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Ernest C. Draper entertained at dinner last evening at the Shoreham. Others in the company were the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Marvin H. McIntyre, the Naval Aid to the President and Mrs. Wilson Brown, the Acting Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and Mrs. Alexander Dye, and the hostess' brother-in-law and sister, Col. and Mrs. Thomas Crimmins, of New York and Noroton, Conn.

Becks Are Honored.

The new United States Consul General at Oslo, Norway and Mrs. William H. Beck were the guests in whose honor a group of their friends entertained at dinner last night at the Shoreham. Mr. and Mrs. Beck are stopping at the hotel for some time, having come from the former's post in Ottawa, Canada, where he served four years as Consul General. Mr. and Mrs. Beck will be in the Capital until Friday when they will go to New York to remain until January 29, when they will sail aboard the Manhattan for Norway.

Among the guests at the dinner last night were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Syme, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Hostettler, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Gott, jr., Dr. and Mrs. Coleman Fishback, Dr. and Mrs. William B. Sims, Mr. and Mrs. Woodson Houghton, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hamilton Knox, and Mr. Theodore Cogswell.

Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley entertained at an informal dinner last night in their home on Cleveland avenue when their guests were Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams and Senator and Mrs. A. Harry Moore.

Navy Selection Session Brings Notables Here

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred Johnson have as their house guests at their residence, 2137 R street northwest, Admiral and Mrs. William C. Watts, of Philadelphia, who are frequent popular visitors in the Capital and who have come this time to attend the meeting of the Navy Selection Board.

Honoring their guests, Admiral and Mrs. Johnson entertained at an informal tea yesterday, to which a few close friends of Admiral and Mrs. Watts were invited. Admiral Watts is in command of the Fourth Naval District and Navy Yard in Philadelphia.

Commander and Mrs. John Bailey Longstaff will entertain at a cocktail party this afternoon in compliment to Admiral and Mrs. Watts, and on Friday afternoon a similar affair will be given in their honor by Commander and Mrs. William Granat.

Admiral Cannon, who is in command of the destroyers of the scouting fleet on the West Coast, arrived on Monday to be the guest of Commander and Mrs. Charles H. Morris for the duration of the meeting. Admiral George Pettingill, who is on duty in California, and Mrs. Pettingill, who have many friends in the Capital, have also arrived in Washington.

Admiral Walter N. Vernou, who with Mrs. Vernou, were popular members of Capital society when the former was stationed here as Naval Aide to President Hoover and for a short time as aide to President Roosevelt, has arrived in Washington. Mrs. Vernou remained on the West Coast where Admiral Vernou was transferred from Newport where he and Mrs. Vernou resided for some time following their departure from their Washington post.

Among others who are attending the selection board meeting are Admiral Charles F. Freeman from Norfolk, Va.; Admiral Arthur P. Fairfield, who is stationed on the Pacific Coast; Admiral John W. Greenslade, Admiral Johnson and Admiral Henry E. Lackey, the latter three of whom are stationed in Washington.

Justices' Wives Are Patronesses

Company Will Present "Le Coq d'Or" Opera at Matinee.

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts and Mrs. Harold Foster Stone, the wives of two justices of the United States Supreme Court ,are among the many prominent patrons and patronesses in Washington for the first appearance here of the Russian opera group known as the Art of Musical Russia, Inc., in two operas a week from next Sunday, at the National Theater.

This company, which will present "Le Coq d'Or," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, as a matinee, and "Boris Godounov," by Moussorgsky, at night, has produced many unusual productions, among them "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk," which was done in New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland. The company has appeared with both the New York Philharmonic and the Philadelphia Symphony orchestras.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, of Washington, has seen this company in several productions and is so enthusiastic she wired, while still out of town, reservations for a large party for both performances to be given here.

Other patronesses include Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Henry P. Fletcher and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson.

Gypsy Party Scheduled By St. Columba's Guild

St. Columba's Guild will hold a gypsy party in the parish hall at Forty-second and Albemarle streets Friday evening. Attendants who will appear in gypsy costumes are the Misses Betty Fletcher, Ann Horn, Sylvia Buell, Ruth LeMoine, Frances Jones, Olive Belt, Sue Fletcher, Ruth Buell, Katherine Reed and Cara Horn.

Humanity Held Club Women's Chief Concern

Mrs. Dunbar, Vice President of Federation, Refutes Idea of Teacup Tilting.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ACTIVE IN organization work for almost 30 years Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, first vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has yet to see a woman's club where members are generally more concerned with tilting tea cups than with providing clothes for needy families, promoting health campaigns and contributing to civic improvement.

"From what I've observed, women's groups are particularly active and effective in health and welfare work," said this blue-eyed woman who came from Portland, Oreg., to attend the meeting of directors of the general Federation. "Health and welfare work has been my business for a number of years, so perhaps I see in club work only what I'm personally interested in," she continued. "But I'm convinced that whatever women's clubs have done—or have not done—they certainly made women conscious of community needs and have provided avenues through which women can contribute to human welfare."

Worth Unquestioned.

Mrs. Dunbar feels, in other words, that numerous women's organizations function as unpaid welfare agencies, and that "the worth of women's clubs is never questioned by persons who know just how much such organizations help in putting over municipal projects."

As executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis Association, Mrs. Dunbar has noted particularly the co-operation this organization has received from women's clubs throughout the State. "Local, district and State federations have supported us so effectively I am convinced that women, presenting a united front, moving toward any goal, would have almost limitless power."

She further explained that thousands of club women throughout the country had given a share of their time as board members of tuberculosis associations. Countless others, she said, make valuable contributions in any health campaign by managing booths where money is solicited, by handling publicity and by serving as chairmen for benefit performances—plays, pageants, exhibits and fashion.

Health Studies Cited.

In this connection she mentioned the value of community health studies numerous clubs have been making.

"What each club does depends, of course, on what the community needs," she said. "There are almost as many approaches to health and welfare work as there are clubs. One organization may furnish baskets of food for families that would starve otherwise. Others may provide clothes for ragged children, or sponsor scholarship funds for boys and girls who could never be educated without help. Still others may see that hospital facilities and medical attention are adequate in a city, that the water and milk supplies are sanitary."

Discussing other values of club work, Mrs. Dunbar pointed out educational advantages women themselves may gain from it.

"The constant challenge of a swiftly-changing world has made imperative the developing of group consciousness among women," she said. "A club can be a woman's training school for public life. It can also be a medium through which a woman can express herself. Working singly in a man-made world woman today has very little power. In a group, working with other women, she can accomplish a great deal."

Own Record a Proof.

Mrs. Dunbar's progress in club work, coupled with her advance in public health endeavor, is proof enough a woman can lead "a double life" and make a success of two lines of work, when one bears on the other.

Her connection with public health projects in Portland prepared her for her first club office—chairman of public health in the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Then she became president of the State organization, was later made Oregon director of the National Federation, and eventually moved to higher offices until she became vice president of the general federation.

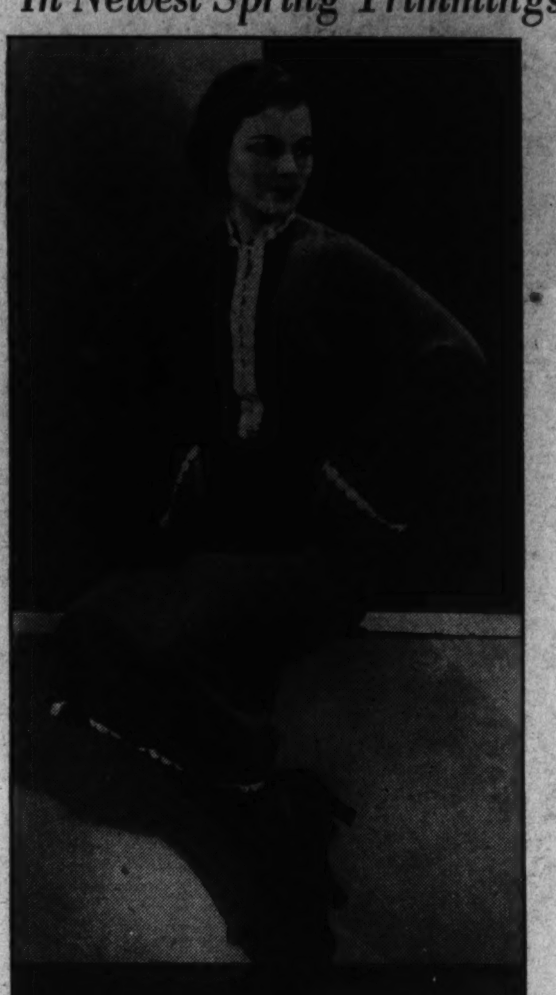
Braid Assumes Daintier Role In Newest Spring Trimmings



By Frances Mangum.

BRAID THAT GAVE A MILITARY smartness to clothes last fall has undergone a flippant and feminine change. It is appearing now in the role of lace and is literally dripping from sleeves, vests, and even hems.

For proof, see the accompanying picture. Here is a chic afternoon dress, tailored and plain except for the curley cues of braid running rampant around the full bell-shaped sleeves, down either side the front slit, and scallopy-like around the bottom of the dress.

Hitherto, if you will call to mind the jaunty braided effect of the past season, braid echoed the war notes of Europe by forming in stiff brigade-ish lines around collars, sleeves and peplums. Now, however, that the grand moguls of fashiondoms have decreed, dantier, softer and more feminine styles for spring, trimming follows this course. Ribbons, bows, flowers, and feathers have played their parts and now braid adapts iself to a new mode.

Half the effectiveness of the dress shown here is due to its charming simplicity and individuality of trimming. The color, too, places it in the front ranks of favorites. It's that fascinating green that verges on blue, or if you'd rather—a blue that's turned green. Spring color charts call it "tropical green." It's hard to distinguish from "sea green."

The material is a lightweight wool that feels like crepe. A material that is ideal now. It's sufficiently light to wear comfortably under a coat, even on balmy days. And yet, it's warm enough to wear without a wrap when spring begins in earnest.

For the cruise wardrobe it's a perfect frock since it's suited to a variety of climates and occasions. It's a dress for mornings and afternoons. For luncheons and small teas. And it's a dress that you won't tire of quickly.

It seels at a price that's unbelievably modest. Sixteen ninety-five, if you please!

Palm Beach Interiors Emphasize White Tones

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 14 (AP).—White in upholstering, draperies and lamp shades is the new note in interior decorating in Palm Beach, mainly brought about by the colonial and Bermuda styles of architecture that are replacing the Spanish.

White iron patio and loggia furniture provides a substantial background for colorful cushions. Outdoor luncheon tables of iron have glass tops.

Brides Never Nervous But Men Are Terrified

Brides are never nervous, but most bridegrooms are terrified, according to W. J. Armstrong, secretary of Old St. John's Church in New York City.

In the last five years Armstrong has been "best man" for more than 1,000 couples. As part of his duties he has obtained nearly as many matrons of honor, and on one occasion bought flowers for a last-minute bride at her request.

By Dorothea Duncan.

What do you do with the yolks of eggs after the angel cake is made? It is sometimes a good idea to make a golden cake also, especially if one cake is for a special occasion, or if you have a large family and one cake lasts no longer than a day. Then, too, you might divide the yolks and make Holladaise sauce of some, and cooked salad dressing of the rest. You can poach several in hot water and use them whole or sieved in salad.

If you want to make a real delicacy from leftover egg yolks, however, try the following recipe for Mallow fluff, which is suggested as today's dinner dessert.

Mallow Fluff.

5 egg yolks
¾ cup sugar
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Few grains salt
½ pint whipping cream
12 marshmallows

Beat egg yolks well, add sugar and salt, then gradually add scalded milk. Cook carefully in the top part of a double boiler over boiling water, until the custard coats a silver spoon.

Soften the gelatin in the cold water, and melt it over hot water. Add it to the hot custard and stir well. Add marshmallows and let soften. Let the custard cool, in a bowl of ice water. Whip the cream and fold it into the custard. Let it chill until it stands up in peaks, then pile in dessert glasses. Sprinkle with bright colored coarse granulated sugar. Deep pink is attractive with this delicate, cream colored custard. If preferred, sprinkle with fresh grated orange peel, with chopped nuts or grated bitter chocolate.

Woman's Work Backstage Told By Mrs. Ruby

Stage Technician for Columbia Players Describes Career.

MRS. RUBEY.

WOMEN interested in the stage can find other outlets for their talents besides taking bows across the footlights. Behind the scenes is an army of technicians, many of them women, who design scenery, manage properties and direct production.

Such a designer and property manager is Jane Lasater Rubey, for 3 years technical director of the Columbia Players. Mrs. Rubey aspired originally to be an actress. She first tried out for a high school part. She didn't get the part, but was placed in charge of properties. So congenial was this type of work that she has been doing it ever since.

During her student days at the University of Washington Mrs. Rubey learned the fine points of theater management in a workshop course there, and became the university's first woman stage manager. She polished off her training in the theater with a course at Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh.

Stage Technician.

"The successful woman stage technician," said Mrs. Rubey, "must be a jack-of-all-trades and a 'gadgeteer'. She must have unflagging vitality and the stamina to stay on her feet for long hours at a time. She must be able to boss tactfully, since the stage crew which works under her is sure to be composed largely of men. Above all, she must care a great deal about her work."

Mrs. Rubey warns women designers and technicians to stay in the nonprofessional theater, where life is not so difficult, and chances for variety and experiment are easier and more frequent. She thinks that the nonprofessional theater is somewhat ahead of the professional in its technical work.

Eleven Productions.

For the Columbia Players, she has designed and created settings for 11 productions to date. An authentic Russian farmhouse of the period of 1880, with hand-stenciled wall paper, which the Columbians will use in their production of "Uncle Vanya" January 15 and 16, is one of her favorites.

Mrs. Rubey's other sets have ranged from a mountain cabin in "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" to a villa at Lake Como, with a painted backdrop of the lake by day and a different one of the lake by moonlight. This year she has ahead of her an Austrian battleship, 14 sets for "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model" and an English cottage, but is not daunted at the prospect.

Mrs. Rubey sees no difference in the necessary equipment for men and women in the field of stage technician.

"Canvas and paint," she said, "and 25 cents and a little imagination, can sometimes create a more exciting theatrical effect than a thousand dollars and an unseeing mind."

Ultra-Feminine Mode Finds Favor in Florida

THE ASS IN THE LION'S SKIN
An ass, finding the skin of a lion, put it on, and going into the woods and pastures, threw all of the flocks and herds into a terrible consternation. Lotion Tames Most Stubborn Unruly Locks

Liquid Brilliantine Coaxes Fluffy Hair Into Place and Keeps It There.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NEXT to losing your petticoat at a state reception or standing on the bride's train at a wedding, it's most embarrassing to have your hair come cascading down during church. And it will sometimes if it's very fine, fluffy hair that's dry and unresponsive to hairpins.

Not that it always waits until church. It falls at random, during a dance, at a dinner party, or anywhere else, if you haven't disciplined it to stay put. It's particularly precocious after being shampooed. Then in it's stubborn willful way it won't stay in place for more than 30 minutes at a time unless you take strict measures. Why don't you try coaxing it with some of the liquid brilliantine made by a famous old cosmetic house? This is an excellent lotion which gives gloss and sheen to the hair and makes it completely docile.

If you have that fly-away hectic look, which so frequently results from stringy, strangly hair then you'll find a bottle of this brilliantine an answer to your beauty prayers.

You may use it without fear that it will make your hair sticky and greasy or that it will prove in any way harmful. It's a tried, and proven product that you can trust to do all it's supposed to.

Spring Collars.

YOU CAN get a jump on the crocus, the lilies, and all the harbingers of spring by giving your black dress a hint of the balmy season to come with one of the ever, ever, ever so chic collars fascinating shoppers in a local store.

Honest and truly, you never saw such collars for $1. They have style and individuality—and quality. There's one that comes high around the neck with lacy ruffle after ruffle, and then goes tumbling down the front of your dress Ascot fashion in more ruffles.

And there are others that are tailored. Made of a soft white crepe or pique, they are plain and depend on their cut and way of hanging for their volume of style.

Movie Star Perfume.

MOVIE star, Jean Muir, arrived in New York on the Berengaria the other day. Among the things she expressed enthusiasm about was a new perume find. It seems that she is very fond of perfumes and while in Paris went the rounds of all the perfume salon sniffing and testing for something different. In the Rue de la Paix salon of one old French house she discovered one fragrance which she particularly liked. So, what did Miss Muir do but come trotting back to this country with several big bottles. And all the time she could have bought it here.

It's a rich, tangy fragrance with undertones of wistfulness and overtones of gayety and glamour. She especially liked it because, she says, it's the kind of a perfume you can wear morning, afternoon, and night without fear it will clash with your costumes.

Belts Glorify Dress.

THIS season with its fashion emphasis on belts has taught us that a plain and not so fascinating dress can acquire a brand new and devastating personality when it undergoes a minor change or two. For instance, a bright, wide-awake flower at the V of the neck and a rich, lovely belt around the waist. Already there's a new note!

If you're planning to renovate a dress you might be interested in the belts—gold and silver mesh—selling in a downtown store for as little as $1.19. Ssh—it's a secret—but there are belts here valued up to $5, going for this first named measly sum.

Some of the belts are wide, some narrow, some glorified with fancy jeweled buckles, others plain, almost to the point of being tailored.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE HAS a job and a trim little car and wears stunning tailored clothes. Naturally her old room at home isn't up to her ideas, so she is now all absorbed in converting it into a bed-sitting room. She is buying a studio couch, a desk, a mirror, a chest of drawers and new chairs, and wants a color scheme of black and silver. But what about details, she asks. Would we approve black walls, black furniture and silver woodwork and curtains?

While the silver and black color scheme would be quite dramatic, we would be inclined to add a warm color to complement these two. She might consider coral, vermillion, chartreuse or some one of the light raspberry shades. And we should be very much afraid of black walls with black furniture, as the effect might be very somber to live with.

Why not have silver walls with black furniture, and add bright spots of coral color in lamps, chair coverings and accessories? We should have coral color at the windows, too, but she might paint the floors black and use white fur rugs there to good effect.

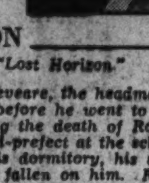
WAS IT MURDER?



By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell—37 in 1927—visits Robert Roseveare, the headmaster of Oakington School which Revell attended before he went to Oxford—to try to solve the mystery surrounding the death of Robert Marshall, younger brother of Wilbraham, head-prefect at the school. The boy was found dead one morning in his dormitory, his skull pierced by an old gas light fixture that had fallen on him. Roseveare gives Revell a copy of the evidence presented at the inquest. It all points to accidental death.

CHAPTER 3.

DOCTOR ROSEVEARE next gave evidence, if evidence it could be called. The coroner allowed him latitude to make a few kindly remarks concerning the dead boy and to express sympathy with his relatives. From that he passed to the more practical announcement that the governors of the school had already given orders for the complete electrification of the entire buildings. He also craved leave to state, since the point had been raised, that there never had been, to his knowledge, any instance of Oakington boys swinging on the gas-fittings. The incident presumably referred to by one of the witnesses had been that of a window cleaner who had carelessly broken off one of the fittings with his ladder. As headmaster, he thought it only fair, in the interests of the school, to mention this.

That was all. The jury, without retiring, returned the inevitable verdict was "accidental death."

Roseveare waited in silence until he could see that Revell had got to the end. Then, moving forward a little in his chair, he coughed interrogatively. "Well? And what do you think of it?"

Revell handed back the cutting. "It was an odd sort of accident, of course," he commented. "But then, odder ones have happened, I daresay."

MRS. ELLINGTON,
Dark-haired, almost pretty.

"Precisely." Roseveare's gray, deep-set eyes quickened a little. "I naturally regarded it in that light myself. So did the poor boy's guardian, a Col. Graham living in India, from whom I received a most courteous and sympathetic letter. And then, just about a week ago I had a letter from Col. Graham—a second letter. He suggested that Mr. Ellington, as the poor boy's housemaster and cousin, should take charge of his personal belongings until he himself came home from India in about six months' time. I had naturally been expecting instructions of such a kind and had already had everything collected and stored away. I was just looking them over before passing them on to Ellington when—to make a longish story a little shorter—I chanced upon this." He produced a second slip of paper from his wallet. "It was between the pages of the boy's algebra book."

Note From Marshall.

It was a sheet of notepaper with the Oakington crest and letter heading. At the top was the date, September 18, 1927. And underneath, in carefully printed capital letters, the following:

"If anything should happen to me, I leave everything to my brother Wilbraham, except my three-speed bicycle, which I leave to Jones Tertius.

"(Signed.)

"ROBERT MARSHALL."

Revell, after a short pause, handed back the document without remark. Roseveare went on, "You can perhaps imagine my feelings at the discovery of such a thing. It raised—hardly perhaps so much as a suspicion—but sort of—shall I say a sort of curiosity in my mind. It was rather disconcerting to reflect that on the very evening before the boy died he had been thinking of his own possible death."

Revell nodded. "What is it," he asked, "that you would like me to do?"

"Nothing definite, I assure you—nothing definite at all. Just consider, if I may so express it, that for a few days you hold a watching brief. Here, as I have told them to you, are the facts—presenting a situation that is, shall we agree to say, abnormal enough to be worth a little extra attention if only for its own sake. Just look over it yourself and tell me how you feel about it—that's really all I have in mind."

"But surely, sir, you don't suspect——"

"My dear boy, I suspect nothing and nobody. As a matter of fact"—the emotional inflection was in his voice again—"this terrible business was a great blow to me—far greater than I have allowed people to see. Apart from personal regrets, the publicity that the whole affair received was a great setback to the school. You may or may not know, Revell, the state in which I found things when I first came here. For half a dozen years I have toiled hard to raise and improve, and then—comes this. There is no one on my staff in whom I would care to confide. I cannot probe into the matter myself—to do so would draw even greater attention to it. And yet, of course, there may be nothing at all to probe . . . . My nerves, I am aware, are not in the best condition—I need a long holiday which I shall not be able to take until the summer vacation next year. I can see you are tremendously mystified by all this. And no wonder. It is all, I daresay, perfectly absurd."

"I must admit, sir, I don't see a scrap of evidence to suggest anything really wrong."

Coincidences Happen.

"Of course not. There isn't any, I don't suppose. And yet—there's that little demon of curiosity in my mind—why was the boy thinking of death on that Sunday evening?"

"Who can say? Coincidences like that do happen. And there's nothing very remarkable in the note itself. Just the fatuous sort of thing I might have written myself on a Sunday night after chapel when I'd nothing else to do."

"Probably—you comfort me even by saying so. Nevertheless, you will not decline my vague and probably quite ridiculous commission?"

"Oh, of course not, if you would really like me to look into it."

"Good. You see, no doubt, how well suited you are for the task. As a distinguished old boy of the school, you have the best of reasons for being here as my guest. You can talk to both boys and masters without anyone questioning your bona fides. No one, of course, knows or need know why you are really here. You understand?"

"Oh, yes."

"Then I leave things in your hands. I have heard splendid accounts, my dear Revell, of your work in connection with a certain regrettable affair at Oxford. This, I hope, will be less serious . . . . You were in School House, I believe, when you were here?"

"Yes."

"Good—that will give you a convenient excuse for meeting Ellington. I mentioned your visit to him, in fact—he suggested you might care to breakfast with him tomorrow morning."

"I should be delighted."

"Most likely he will drop in later on tonight to meet you . . . Another cigar? Yes, do, please. Are you interested, by the way, in etching? I have one or two here that are considered to be rather choice."

Roseveare Sympathetic.

Revell perceived that the discussion, for the time being, was over, and he could not but notice and admire the ease with which the other resumed his earlier manner. Nerves or not, he certainly had them well under control. They talked on for over an hour on varied topics. Roseveare showed himself to be a man of remarkably wide interests and obviously enjoyed an exchange of views with the younger generation. Yet there was not a trace of patronage or of condescension in his attitude. He listened sympathetically when Revell told him of his literary work and of the Don Juan epic. Revell liked him more and more, it was as if their recent more serious talk had been a strange interlude in a much more real intimacy.

Toward 10 o'clock Ellington arrived and was introduced. He was a heavily built, middle aged fellow, thickset of feature and going a little bald. Under his impact the conversation sagged instantly. He appeared cordial enough about the breakfast invitation, but Revell gathered that it was his housemasterly habit to ask School House old boys to breakfast, and that he did it as a sort of routine duty. Revell, in fact, was not greatly attracted to him. When he had gone Roseveare faintly shrugged his shoulders. "A hard worker, Ellington, and a devoted colleague. But not much of a conversationalist, I am afraid. However . . . Perhaps you will take a little whisky before going up to bed? I usually do so myself."

And, since Revell usually did so whenever he had the chance, the ritual was jointly observed.

Indifference Excellent Cure For Tantrums

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

SAM was subject to temper tantrums of such violence that his family sometimes expected him to go into convulsions.

As a result of their fear of serious consequences, they generally gave in to his demands and in time put themselves at the child's mercy. He ruled the household with the threat of having a tantrum.

His fater and mother hoped that he would outgrow them, but found instead that they grew worse as time passed. Even after he was a grown man he continued to exhibit an unbridled display of temper which made his name a by-word in the community.

Indifference Needed.

The best way to treat temper tantrums is with utter indifference. The first time the child loses control of itself and begins to kick and scream, he should be picked up, with no expression of surprise or anger and put into another room with the door closed. The life of the household should go on uninterruptedly, conversation should be resumed where it was left off. When the child finds that instead of holding everyone's attention and getting his own way, he is ignored, he will soon recover, for indifference is an attitude which uncontrol cannot endure.

Water Cure.

If, for any reason a child has been permitted to form a habit of getting his own way by tantrums, he is best cured by being put into a tub of water—not warm water, but sufficiently cool to shock him. One such treatment is generally enough.

It is useless, indeed it adds fuel to the flames, to meet temper with temper. Whoever deals with the matter must keep his head and handle the child firmly but in a matter-of-fact and casual way. The tantrum is merely the child's effort to obtain attention and by this means to get what he wants. If he fails to succeed in both aims, he soon stops.

Homeless Dogs Given Refuge By Irene Castle

Former Star Is Foster Mother to Thousands of Stray Orphans of Storm.

By Dudley Harmon.

STILL BEAUTIFUL Irene Castle, who introduced bobbed hair and the fox trot to the world, now plays the role of foster mother to thousands of stray puppies nobody wants.

Yesterday Miss Castle, or Mrs. McLaughlin, as she is in private life, came to Washington to address a luncheon given by the International Conference for the Investigation of Vivisection. On a farm near her home in Lake Forest, Ill., Mrs. McLaughlin maintains a port of missing dogs, which she christened "Orphans of the Storm."

"Ever since I can remember," said Mrs. McLaughlin yesterday, "I've been interested in dogs, especially homeless dogs. My first husband and former dancing partner, Vernon Castle, felt the same way. When we toured vaudeville, we invariably went broke buying up all the abused dogs we saw in the animal acts. We returned from these tours with a procession of browbeaten puppies in our wake.

Attraction for Dogs.

"I can spot a miserable animal three miles away, and I seem to have a great attraction for them. When I go out for a walk, all the stray dogs in the neighborhood tag along at my heels."

Twelve years ago, Mrs. McLaughlin, who retired from the stage after her marriage, built her harbor for homeless puppies in Deerfield, Ill. Here the dogs live in clean, well-scrubbed kennels, and are given one square meal a day. A distemper hospital and a quarantine compound take care of dogs which have come from neighboring pounds.

Anyone adopting a dog from Mrs. McLaughlin must sign a contract promising to treat it kindly. The document also says that the new owner will be prosecuted if he turns the pet over to laboratories for vivisection purposes.

The "orphans of the storm" even have their own constitution, which is framed and hangs on the wall of the executive offices. Among stipulations in the constitution are demands for a fresh bone every day for dessert, on condition that it is not to be buried in the flower pot, and a quiet place in the cellar every Fourth of July.

The former dancer, clad in blue denim overalls, and wearing spotless white gloves, personally attends to the mongrels three afternoons a week. She interviews each prospective owner herself.

In her fight for fair treatment to animals, Mr. McLaughlin has waged a militant battle against vivisection. She deems this practice unnecessary and of no material benefit to humanity. She is now a party to a lawsuit pending in the appellate court of Illinois to test the legality of the Arvey ordinance, which permits disposal of pound inmates to hospitals and universities.

Idleness Intolerable.

Mrs. McLaughlin, who has been voted "one of America's 12 most beautiful women," and "America's best-dressed woman," wishes every day could be stretched into 32 hours. She sleeps only six hours a night, but wishes that there was still more time left for her husband, her four children, two of whom are adopted and her puppies. Idleness, to her, is intolerable. In her spare moments she runs a hat shop to help pay the expenses of "Orphans of the Storm."

She has never regretted her transition from "dancer to dog-catcher," to use her own words.

Maj. McLaughlin at first was not enthusiastic about his wife's career.

"But shortly before Christmas," said Mrs. McLaughlin, "he brought home a stray dog himself, so I think he is well on the way to becoming a convert."

Irene Castle Says She's "Dog Catcher" Now

Three days each week beautiful Mrs. Frederick McLaughlin, of Lake Forest, Chicago, dons blue denim overalls and personally attends many of the 8,000 dogs in her animal rescue shelter, Orphans of the Storm. She says that her present career as champion of the underdog is more fascinating than that of a dancer.

France's Pioneer Woman Flier Wins Acclaim in a Dozen Lines

Mlle. Marvingt, Here for Alliance Francaise Meeting, Is Sportswoman, Inventor, Teacher, Poet, Artist, Journalist and World War Veteran.

WHEN THE ALLIANCE FRANCAISE meets this afternoon at the Carlton Hotel, the honor guest and speaker will be Mlle. Marie Marvingt, pioneer French aviatrix, who has also won acclaim as an all-around sportswoman, inventor, teacher, poet, editor, journalist and artist.

With a long list of accomplishments and a stack of photographs depicting her as a flier, soldier and mountain climber, Mlle. Marvingt recently arrived in Washington after a five-month air tour of this country. She came over to study American aviation, she said, and to find out "how to stimulate interest in aviation in France."

Yesterday in a rapid-fire flow of words, she revealed she was the first woman flier to be licensed by the French government, that she set the world record for women in 1910 when she stayed in the air 56 minutes, and that she is the only person to be awarded a gold medal in all sports at the French Academy of Sports.

Since 1900, when she made a balloon ascent in France, Mlle. Marvingt has been establishing air records. In 1909, she gained much attention by her daring flight across the North Sea in a balloon. She was the first person—man or woman—to accomplish such a feat. "Fifty-two times the balloon dropped almost to the water," she said, relating some of the incidents of the journey," but always it soared again and finally got across."

With a number of inventions to her credit, she is proudest, of all, of the ambulance she designed. "I have been told there are six ambulance planes in America now," she said, "but I have traveled all over the country without finding one of them."

Another of her inventions is the metallic ski, to be used in traveling across sand. "You would have little use for that in America," she said, "but in country such as you find around Morocco metallic skis expedite travel as much as wooden skiis on snow."

Probably few women in the world have a wider range of interests than this fast-talking, enthusiastic French woman. She speaks five languages fluently and has studied literature and the sciences extensively. At one time she was a pupil of Sara Bernhardt. At another she established two schools—one in France and one in Morocco—to train nurses to administer medical aid in the air.

During the World War Mlle. Marvingt was a member of the Forty-second Battalion and served as a regular soldier in the trenches. Her experiences in this capacity are some she has never related. "I plan to tell some of them when I talk later at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia," she said, "but not now."

Her chief interest, she admits, however, is aviation. She is an expert balloonist, has had much experience piloting gliders and aquaplanes and has negotiated 900 airplane landings without an accident.

Husband Has Schoolboy Crush on Beautiful Girl; Wife Asks What to Do; Says Her Position Is Ridiculous and She Is More Than a Little Annoyed.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What can I do, if anything, about my husband's having a schoolboy crush on a beautiful young girl? It is really just that and nothing more, but it certainly puts me in a ridiculous position. I can't blame either of them, because no married man (no matter how happily married) can help responding to a sweet, pretty girl and any young girl enjoys being able to make an impression on a married man. Also, if she has a sense of humor, she is much amused to find how easy it is! This particular girl hasn't; she is simply flattered by my husband's admiration and liking and plays up to it, even to the extent of giving him a personal Christmas present. The bad taste of that must be overlooked in view of her innocence.

It's all quite harmless, you see, but just the same it makes me feel very silly and a little mad, and not at all inclined to be more than a wife in name only for the time being. Is there any subtle way of clearing the atmosphere, or must I just wait and let nature take it's course? Sincerely,

DEPRESSED.

Cultivate the Girl.

DEAR DEPRESSED: If you wish to be subtle in this situation and I believe it a worthwhile ambition, I suggest you chisel in on the beautiful friendship and make it a three-way admiration society. Share your husband's crush on the girl, to all appearances. Share her crush on him. Don't give either any possible loophole for believing or saying they are misunderstood by you as individuals, or that their mutual admiration is misinterpreted by you. If your husband seeks her society on all possible occasions and maybe even invents excuses for being with her, take this burden off his shoulders by seeing to it yourself that she is constantly underfoot. Have her at your parties, as an overnight guest, as a week-end guest, and if you know any nice young men, have them around, too, as much as possible, for her entertainment's sake of course.

* * * *

Can't you make her a family friend, as it were? Ask her to luncheons, to movies, to dinner, on shopping excursions; encourage her to give full tongue to her admiration for your husband, and always go her one better in voicing approving comment on the hero of the piece. Give her by implication and indirection a clear picture of him as a completely devoted and dependable husband and of yourself as a wife enthusiastically and contentedly in love.

* * * *

Your husband's infatuation with the girl will probably run a more rapid course if she seems to meet with your surfeiting approval. Since you can hardly be expected to remain blind to their slightly emotional relationship, you might in intimate conversation with your husband subject him to gentlest ridicule and good-humored teasing, but don't give way to anger or self-pity.

* * * *

I believe the most serious strategic error you could make at the moment would be to adopt the punitive attitude of wife-in-name-only, since the affair you describe seems to be of the most innocent and idyllic sort. Your principal advantage over other women who strike a responsive chord in your husband's breast lies in being his wife, if you are a sensitive, clever and understanding wife.

Health Depends On Maintaining Body Balance

Prompt Detection, Diagnosis of Symptoms Help Check Disease.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WHENEVER the normal functions of the body are thrown out of equilibrium the fact is recognized usually by some symptom. If we fracture the long bone of the thigh (the femur) we will be unable to walk and we realize at once that we must lay up for repairs. Perhaps all signs of disease are not as obvious as a fractured leg; nevertheless, we must train ourselves to detect departures from health. We must do this without any undue amount of self-analysis; certainly without worry or fear.

Most symptoms can be traced to a definite cause. While we pride ourselves on knowing the origin of malaria and its methods of prevention, yet when it occurs we still have the symptoms and the disease to deal with.

Work Is Shared.

Somehow or other the body must be maintained in proper balance. It is easily thrown out of gear, as we say, by hundreds of factors many of which, however, are under our control. So actively does it attempt to accommodate itself to things that go wrong that it often succeeds even though we, the patients, are not willing to help.

If an artery becomes plugged other arteries—small perhaps but supplying the same area—will enlarge so that the muscles and structures of the shutoff part will receive ample nourishment. If the blood pressure rises from some cause the face may become flushed because of engorged capillaries thus relieving the excess pressure on the heart. If a muscle is called upon for a greater amount of work than it is accustomed to it will grow and strengthen so that its power will be equal to the load placed upon it. We are given so much kidney tissue that a considerable portion may be destroyed and the remainder will perform adequately. If lung tissue has been lost by disease then a lighter load should be carried and as a result the lung area may be great enough to supply the blood with oxygen.

Equalizing Mechanism.

We ordinarily secrete 50 ounces of saliva in each 24 hours. This is the starting point in the digestion of food. If food is improperly mixed with saliva or if it is decreased in amount, the stomach and other structures may take up the task and carry on successfully.

If bacteria gain access to the system white blood cells rush in and endeavor to destroy them. Whenever fever generated by increased metabolism develops, the skin attempts by radiation and evaporation to get rid of it. In other words, there is everywhere in the body, an equalizing mechanism that strives to keep the body moving along, as it were, on all four wheels.

Funeral Is Held For 2 Who Died In Suicide Plot

Friends of Mrs. M. D. Koltes and Son Attend Services; Cremate Bodies.

Funeral services were held late yesterday in the grey twilight for Mrs. Kapitola Koltes and her 1-year-old son, Robert William Ashworth, who drank a swiftly-acting poison Friday in the Dupont Circle Apartments because they were depressed by wars and the rumors of wars.

The bodies of Mrs. Koltes and her son, which were cremated Monday, rested in the chapel of the Lee undertaking establishment in two silver urns against a background of flowers.

About 70 persons—friends of the devoted mother and san and lovers of peace—attended the rites, which were directed by Kenneth Durham, of Chattanooga, Tenn., a nephew of Mrs. Koltes.

After a brief program of requiem music, Miss Jeanette Rankin, former Representative from Montana and now an official of the National Council for the Prevention of War, read a letter Mrs. Koltes wrote to her brother, Dr. Victor Williams, of Chattanooga.

The letter deplored war and "the lot of mothers who must give their sons to be killed and maimed in war."

A brief sermon was delivered by the Rev. J. H. Pearson, pastor of the Clarendon Methodist Church.

The ashes of Mrs. Koltes and her son will be taken to Chattanooga for burial in the family plot sometime today.

Barnett Snyder, 52, Dies at Home Here

Born in Kurland, Russia, he traveled extensively throughout Africa and Europe before coming to this city 28 years ago to enter the B. Snyder Wholesale Grocery, Inc., of which he eventually became president. He attended the Fourteenth and Emerson street synagogue and was a member of the B'nai Brith and the Samuel Gompers Lodge of Masons.

Funeral services will be held from the Danzansky funeral home at 11 a. m. today. Interment will be in the B'nai Isral Cemetery.

2 Die in Tenament Fire In Times Square Area

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—Two men were burned to death today in a tenement fire which destroyed the upper two floors of an eight-family building one block from Times Square.

Firemen found the body of Pedro Chaves, 33, on a stairway landing charged by flames which swept up from a lower hallway at 313 West Forty-fourth street.

Widow of Schall Announces Candidacy for U.S. Senate Seat

Will Press Fight Against 'New Deal' if She Is Elected.

Mrs. Thomas D. Schall, widow of the blind Senator from Minnesota, announced at her home in Berwyn, Md., yesterday that she would be a candidate for his seat in the Senate.

If successful, Mrs. Schall would be the third woman to hold a seat in that body. The first was Mrs. William H. Felton, of Cartersville, Ga., who was appointed in a spirit of chivalry by former Gov. Hardwick to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Senator Thomas E. Watson. Mrs. Felton was 87. She attended only two sessions—November 21 and 22, 1922—when Walter F. George took over the seat. Mrs. Felton died in 1930.

Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, of Arkansas, is the only woman ever elected to the Senate. She took her seat by an appointment after the death of her husband, Senator Thaddeus Caraway, but in 1932 was elected to a full six-year term.

Senator Schall, who was married to Mrs. Schall after a college romance in Minnesota, died last month in Casualty Hospital of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near College Park.

Mrs. Schall said yesterday that she had authorized Lewis L. Drill, a St. Paul attorney, to file her nomination papers for the Senate race.

A small, gray-haired, energetic woman, Mrs. Schall said she would make the "same vigorous fight" against the New Deal that her husband had been waging.

The seat made vacant by Senator Schall's death is now occupied by Elmer A. Benson, a Farmer-Laborite, appointed by Gov. Floyd B. Olson. It was understood at the time of the appointment that Benson would step aside for Olson at election time. Whether Olson makes the race, however, depends on his health.

Olson, a Farmer-Laborite, and Schall, a Republican, were bitter political foes. Some of this bitterness is expected to carry over if Olson and Mrs. Schall face each other in the election.

MRS. THOMAS D. SCHALL, in her kitchen yesterday.

First, however, Mrs. Schall must win the Republican nomination in a primary election. Her principal opponent in this, according to an Associated Press dispatch, probably will be Theodore Christianson, a member of the House, who was defeated by Schall in the 1930 senatorial primary. Christianson has not announced his candidacy.

If Olson runs for the Senate, the expectation is that Senator Benson will run for Governor. If Olson decides not to try for the Senate, Benson probably will attempt to gain a six-year lease on the seat.

Those mentioned for the Democratic nomination for the Senate are Einar Hoidale, who lost to Schall by a narrow margin in 1930; Fred Schiplin, St. Cloud publisher, and Joseph Wolf, national committeeman.

Captain Jenks, Officer in Navy In '61 War, Dies

Retired Clipper Master, 98, Succumbs at His Home in District.

Capt. Jenks was born in Pensacola, Fla., but was a member of an old New England sea-faring family of Thomaston, Me.

During the Civil War he served under both Admirals Farragut and Porter as a junior officer. He was on the "Paul Jones" when she was doing blockade duty.

After the war, he retired in 1869 and started out in business for himself. He commanded sailing ships in Central, South America, Liverpool and South African trade.

Among the ships he commanded was the clipper Pelican. He established a record for sailing ships on the run from Rio de Janeiro to Boston.

In 1901 he retired from the sea and settled in Washington. He is survived by a son, Maj. Royal G. Jenks, United States Army, also of this city.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at Hyson's funeral home. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Culbertson on Bridge

Leading Trumps.

The opening lead most shunned by the majority of average players is a trump. This is strange, because in countless situations it is the only effective form of attack.

Particularly when the declarer has shown a two-suited hand, and the about-to-be-dummy has, either by acceptance or direct raise, shown a preference, an immediate attack on dummy's ruffing power is advisable. This is equally true whether the leader himself holds high cards in the declarer's other suit or whether he can anticipate such holding by his partner.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

On any opening except a trump, declarer would have little trouble in making contract. Even a later shift to the ace and another trump could not prevent two spade ruffs in the dummy, which, with South's ace and king of spades and four trump tricks, would make a total of eight.

But on an opening trump lead the picture was considerably changed. South could not establish a cross-ruff without again losing the lead to West's diamond king, and now another trump reduced dummy to a single ruff.

Certainly the trump opening was logical on the bidding. West had no fear of a solid club suit in the dummy—his partner's pass over that bid, in the light of his subsequent take-out double of two hearts, showed a distinct willingness to play against a club contract. While West himself had nothing in spades, it was quite reasonable to suppose that East did have, and consequently it was West's duty to protect these cards. The trump lead was well considered and justly rewarded.

Safety is not a dream

The press of the country has acquainted the public with the shocking facts about automobile accidents. And the public has deplored the country's record of sudden death and worse than death.

To promote street and highway safety there is need for more than public lamentation. It needs the conscientious observance of common-sense practices of driving and walking—practices that are founded on the simple truth that haste breeds accidents.

It needs the impartial, continuous, intelligent efforts of police and courts to enforce traffic laws, and the whole-hearted support of the public in behalf of such action. In the maintenance of enforcement agencies the public is paying for protection to life and property, whether that protection is secured or not.

A few cities can boast of substantial progress in automobile accident prevention. In these communities, speed limits are enforced, traffic lights and other protective devices and measures are respected, and widespread "fixing" of arrest tickets has become a thing of the past.

These cities have saved lives by reducing their accidents. They have demonstrated that street and highway safety is not a dream.

Whether 1936 will record 36,000 or more automobile accident deaths, a million persons injured, and an economic loss of untold millions of dollars, depends largely upon how many communities effectively employ methods that are getting results.

Greater safety on street and highway can be achieved.

Commissioners Submit a Report Opposing Guyer Bill.

License of Delicatessen Liquor Operation Is Revoked.

Isaac Gans yesterday was reappointed by the District Commissioners as a member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. He will serve for four years more.

The commissioners also sent a report to Congress opposing the Guyer bill to prohibit the sale of liquor in Washington. The Commissioners said the liquor law was working satisfactorily.

The ABC board yesterday revoked the license of Barney Goldstein, operator of a liquor and delicatessen store at Fourteenth and Irving streets northwest.

The reappointment of Gans as a member of the control board had been expected. Long prominent in civic affairs, he had served the city in many posts without compensation before he was made a member of the board. Commissioner George E. Allen recommended his reappointment.

Bill of Dry Days.

The Guyer bill, which the Commissioners disapproved, is an embellishment of the old Sheppard law which was in effect here during the prohibition days.

"The Commissioners," said the report sent to Congress yesterday, "recommend that the bill be not enacted. The question is whether the present method of permitting the sale of alcoholic beverages under governmental regulation should be continued, or whether it should be repealed.

"Since the present law was enacted upon the recommendation of the present Administration, and since it has been in effect only for a short period and, generally speaking, is operating satisfactorily, the Commissioners are opposed to its repeal."

The control board, after a hearing yesterday, took Goldstein's license away, although he had been acquitted by a jury in Police Court of selling liquor at a time when it was forbidden.

Given Marked Bill.

William C. Morrill, who was not employed by the police as an informer nor by any other Government agency, initiated the action against Goldstein. Morrill complained to the police. The police gave Mr. Morrill a marked $1 bil. He entered the Goldstein store. He came out with a bottle of liquor.

Goldstein said there had been "bad blood" between them. He said Morrill had bought a package of cigarettes and then had visited the cellar of his place, ostensibly to look for a washroom. He stored his liquor in his cellar, Goldstein said. Robert E. LLynch and F. Joseph Donohue, counsel for the licensee, said they would appeal from the board decision.

Police reports 55 gallons of liquor were found last night by Lieut. Oscar J. Letterman, of the Fourth Precinct, in an automobile parked at Fourth and C streets southwest.

Burleith Group Scores Furors On Red Issue

Summit Park, North Randle and Chevy Chase Citizens Bodies Meet.

The Burleith Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution urging Congress to amend the "Communism" rider to prohibit the "advocacy" in the public schools of any foreign form of government. It was the view of the association that the teaching of the facts of Communism or any other form of government should not be prohibited.

J. S. Gorrell, former president of the organization, who introduced the resolution, said that agitation on the subject was "uncalled for and furthered by certain personalities. Harry Radcliffe, president, expressed belief that "certain flag-waving patriots" were using the issue to keep in the public eye.

A dissenting minority felt that the citizens association should not be concerned with the question—that Congress should decide what should be taught in the District's schools.

Summit Park Meeting.

Quicker removal of snow from streets was urged by the Summit Park Citizens Association. The group also urged that the Thomas Jefferson Memorial be erected in Fort Dupont Park.

A committee was named to study the proposal to give the District the right of referenda on public questions. In a resolution the association indorsed "Civil Service Week."

North Randle Highlands.

A plea to the Federation of Citizens Association, to back their fight for more police and for adequate fire equipment, was made by the North Randle Highlands Community Citizens Association at its meeting.

Members of the association pledged themselves to do their utmost in gaining new members in an attempt to win a silver trophy offered for the largest membership gain.

Chevy Chase Association.

With the Allen referendum plan, communism, public transportation and parking on its agenda, the Chevy Chase Citizens Association will meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the E. V. Brown School, Connecticut avenue and McKinley streets northwest.

Besides discussing this wide range of questions, the association will hold its annual election of officers.

Civitan Club to Buy 25 Acres for Boys

A plan to purchase a 25-acre farm for the Civitan Boys Garden Club was approved after presentation by the board of directors at the Civitan Club dinner at the Lafayette Hotel last night.

The Civitan Boys Garden activities have heretofore been carried out on ground rented for the purpose of keeping needy boys busy during the summer months.

A resolution to send messages of appreciation to merchants who contributed to the club's children's Christmas party was adopted and a report that the year's budget would be approximately the same as last year was made by the club activities committee.

Morris Sales Co. To Hold Banquet

The Edgar Morris Sales Co., Westinghouse Refrigerator distributors for this territory, will sponsor its annual dealer meeting and dinner today at the Mayflower Hotel.

It is expected that 150 dealers and salesmen will attend this meeting at which plans for advertising and promotional activities during the entire year will be discussed, according to George F. Kindley, who is arranging details.

In addtiion to the presentation of advetrising and promotional programs, the new 1936 Westinghouse Refrigerator models will be revealed for the first time in this territory, Kindley said.

Geographic Society to Present Bronze Group by Malvina Hoffman.

Many a man would have been discouraged virtually at the start by the big job frail Malvina Hoffman, sculptor, set out to do several years ago.

This was to make a record of the living races of man in heroic statues of bronze, a project she was commissioned to do for the Field Museum of Natural History of Chicago.

Now her work stands completed and today in the exhibition hall of the National Geographic Society on upper Sixteenth street will open the first show she has had in Washington. Miss Hoffman will attend the exhibition today.

Miss Hoffman is known the world over as the leading woman American sculptor. She was a pupil of Rodin, the French master.

Her travels in completing the Field museum project took her to many foreign countries, where she registered in clay, later casting in bronze, the living features of characteristic individuals. It was a tremendous plan to interpret human geography through art. The exhibit at the National Geographic Society includes 58 reductions and replicas of the 60 giant bronzes now in the Field Museum's Hall of the Races of Mankind. She sought her subjects in their native habitats in South Seas isles and the wilds of Borneo, in the jungles of Africa and the byways of Asia, in the Vale of Kashmir, in Australia, Europe, America and many sections of the globe. A hairy Ainu, on the island of Hokkaido, posed for her in zero temperature. In the Malay jungle, with the thermometer registering around 110 degrees, she rapidly thumbed into shape her model of a shy native woman, whose watchful husband kept a two-edged sword in readiness should the artist make a suspicious move.

Miss Hoffman was a guest yesterday at a luncheon at the Geographic Society attended by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor of the society, Miss Anne Morgan, of New York City, a friend of Miss Hoffman, and members of the society staff.

The exhibition will continue two weeks.

Vinson Asks Test Basin For Navy at Cabin John

Construction of a model basin adjacent to Cabin John, Md., to test aircraft and sea vessels is proposed in a bill introduced yesterday by Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to acquire about 55 acres of land near Cabin John for the project, but carries no appropriation or estimate as to cost.

The basin could be used by private concerns, under the bill, providing they paid the costs incidental to the tests.

Miss Aiken to Speak.

Miss Stella Aiken, assistant to the Attorney General, will speak at the meeting of the Woman's Guild of Sibley Memorial Hospital at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Rust Hall, 1150 North Capitol street.

Bill Is Revised On Selection Of Magistrates

Senate Would Pass Upon All Presidential Choices; Salary $1,000 Yearly.

Judges of the magistrates courts proposed for the District would be appointed by the President, subject to confirmation by the Senate, under terms of an amended measure sent yesterday by the District Commissioners to the Federal Budget Bureau for approval.

As originally drafted, the bill would have required a continuous District residence of not less than five years preceding appointment. This residence minimum was reduced to three years.

The bill proposes to set up four magistrate courts which would be a sort of sub-police court branches. The magistrates would be paid $1,000 a year. Their prescribed hours would be from 8:30 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. and from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m., daily except Sunday.

Sponsored by E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and approved by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, the measure is designed to provide a judicial system for handling of the thousands of minor cases which now clog the Police Court machinery.

The Police Court, Commissioner Hazen and Mr. Prettyman contend, should be left free to devote more time to consideration and trial of cases of a more serious nature. It is estimated that some 50,000 minor cases which now are jammed through Police Court annually could be handled by the magistrates courts. The proposed system would enhance the importance of the Police Court, Commissioner Hazen said.

The proposed new system was born of the activities of the special House District crime inquiry subcommittee of which Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, was chairman.

A case designed to test the legality of the District 2 to 8 a. m. parking ban for purpose of snow removal was continued until Friday by Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Traffic Court yesterday.

The test case involves six parking tickets against Charles E. Ford, attorney, who attempted to bring the case to trial last year. Ford contends there was no snow on the ground at the time he received the tickets and, therefore, there was no emergency.

Ford was originally charged with violating an official sign, but Assistant Corporation Counsel George D. Neilson amended this charge yesterday when he filed papers charging Ford with parking between 2 and 8 a. m. Neilson said this charge would better define the issue at stake.

Crime War Described.

Details of the Government's war on crime will be described by Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in a lecture at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in the Central Y. M. C. A., under auspices of the Young Men's Forum.

Speaker's Attack on Roosevelt Brings Protest at Dyers' Rally

Dry cleaners and dyers in convention here from all over the world were treated yesterday to almost as much excitement as can be created by a lady customer who argues they did not take the ink spot out of her dress so she won't pay.

Representative Dewey Short, Republican from Missouri, made such a bitter attack upon President Roosevelt and his policies that at the conclusion of his convention speech a delegate jumped up and moved that the entire address be stricken from the record. There was a wave of applause as the motion was seconded but the Administration defender was held out of order.

A more embarrassing situation was averted when Senator William H. King, Democrat, of Utah, left the Wardman Park Hotel convention floor soon after delivering his address of welcome. He was not present when Short warned the cleaners they must choose between "dictatorship or democracy" when ballots are cast in November.

Representing almost every State in the Union and such foreign countries as Poland, Holland, Scotland and England, the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners will continue today and tomorrow. Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, spoke last night at the dinner given at the Hotel Mayflower in honor of Jed D. Gore, of Beaumont, Tex., association president.

U.S. Approves District Job Security Act

Employment Insurance Waits Appropriations From Congress.

Laws of Five States Also Are Given Sanction of National Unit.

Approval of the unemployment compensation laws of the District and of five States was announced yesterday by the Federal Social Security Board.

Approval of the District law was regarded as a foregone conclusion by District officials inasmuch as the local law had been enacted by the same session of Congress which created the Federal board. Nevertheless Congress provided the board must approve the laws of the District and the various States before any of the political divisions became eligible to share in the benefits of the Federal funds available for approved sections.

Approval of the local law was the first of a series of formal steps which must be taken before the local law can become effectively operative. The local unemployment compensation commission has no money with which to operate. Neither has the Federal board. Both are awaiting appropriation of funds by Congress. These were provided in the last deficiency appropriation bill, enactment of which was prevented by the last spectacular filibuster of the late Senator Huey P. Long in the last session of Congress.

Laws of other States, which the commission announced it had approved, were Alabama, California, New Hampshire, Oregon and Wisconsin.

"This means," the Federal board said, "that employers in these five States and the District of Columbia who are required to pay a Federal pay-roll tax under the provisions of Title IX of the social security act may offset against that tax, up to 90 per cent thereof, the amount of their contributions to the unemployment compensation funds of these States.

"The Social Security Board has under consideratoin for approval the unemployment compensation laws of Massachusetts, New York and Washington. The State of Utah also has an unemployment compensaton law, but this has not yet been formally submitted to the board for approval.

"In making this announcement the board pointed out that unemployment compensation does not become an actuality in any States until the Legislature of that State has enacted an unemployment compensatoin law."

Bard to Address Medical Society

Prof. Philip Bard, head of the department of physiology at Johns Hopkins University, will address the Smith-Reed-Russell Society and the students and faculty of the school of medicine of George Washington University at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the Medical School Building.

Prof. Bard will speak on "The Neural Bases of Certain Forms of Emotional Expression." He has been head of the physiological department of Johns Hopkins for the last year. Before that he held assistant professorships at Harvard and Princeton in similar departments there.

The Smith-Reed-Russell Society, under whose auspices this lecture will be delivered, was organized in honor of the late Theabald Smith, Walter Reed and Col. Frederick Fuller Russell.

Rudder Damaged, Liner Makes for Canada Port

Baltimore, Jan. 14 (U.P.)—Her rudder badly damaged while running out of a gale off Newfoundland, the Baltimore Mail Line steamer City of Hamburg reported to its home office here tonight that it was making for St. Johns for repairs.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Taft, bound for Warsaw, Poland, where Taft will be American vice consul, and six other passengers were aboard. The vessel left for Europe last Thursday.

According to a radio dispatch received here, the ship ran into a gale yesterday. Late today, as the storm subsided, the damaged rudder was discovered and Capt. Joseph E. Lee decided to call at St. Johns for repairs.

Midshipman Resigns, Weds D. C. Schoolgirl

Donald Nelson and Miss Marjorie Ann True Are Married in Elkton.

The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and Holton Arms School in Washington lost a student apiece, it became known yesterday with the announcement here of the marriage at Elkton, Md., Saturday of Marjorie Ann Trew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Trew, of the Westchester Apartments, and Donald Piper Nelson, 21, a former midshipman.

Mr. Trew is a well known Washington auto dealer. The first word he and Mrs. Trew had of their daughter's marriage was when the couple appeared at their apartment Sunday morning and announced the wedding.

The former Miss Trew was a student at fashionable Holton Arms School for two years. Prior to that she studied at Harcum School, at Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Mrs. Trew said last night the couple had been friends more than a year. She said their marriage was not entirely unexpected.

Coulter Urged By Dr. Ruhland As Health Aid

Action Is Expected Friday on Selection of Tuberculosis Expert.

Appointment of Dr. A. Barklie Coulter as director of the Bureau of Tuberculosis of the District Health Department was recommended to the District Commissioners yesterday by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer.

Dr. Coulter has been serving as volunteer director of the tuberculosis case finding campaign which the health department has been conducting with the co-operation of the District Tuberculosis Association. Action on the recommendation is expected to be taken by the Commissioners on Friday.

"The work in case-finding," Dr. Ruhland said in his recommendation to the Commissioners, "has now progressed to a point where it becomes imperative that the clinical services maintained by the department for dealing with tuberculosis be brought under competent direction of a specialist in tuberculosis.

"Dr. Coulter declines to accept the proposition on a full-time basis. Because of the urgency of getting a properly authorized head for this special bureau activity, the advisory board (of the campaign), is of the opinion that the immediate necessity for the addition would best be served by accepting the half-time services of Dr. Coulter, providing Dr. Coulter will be willing to accept this service."

Dr. Coulter, it is said, will accept the appointment, if it is made. The job calls for a salary of $5,600 a year. Under the part-time temporary arrangement he would be paid at the rate of $2,800 a year.

Tina Flade to Present Dance Recital Friday

Tina Flade, head of the dance department of Mills College, California, will give a recital on Friday night in the King-Smith Studio Playhouse, below the Shoreham Hotel. A pupil of Mary Wigman, Miss Flade is a brilliant young exponent of the modern German development of interpretative dancing. She recently won critical praise for her program in the Guild Theater, New York.

Miss Flade will open and close her program with interpretations of music by Henry Cowell, including "Sinister Resonence," played directly on the piano strings, and the dramatic "Fire Cycle," composed expressly for her. Other composers represented are Rudhyar, Crawford, Corelli, Caturla, and Green. Ruth Hunt will be at the piano.

New Bill Seeks 44-Hour Wage For Mail Shops

Measures Offered in House Affect Restricted U. S. Employes.

Two bills affecting hours and wages of restricted groups of Government employes were introduced in the House yesterday.

Amendment to the postal service 40-hour week act to provide that mail equipment shop employes be paid for 44 hours although working but 40 hours was offered by Representative Mead, chairman of the House Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads. The change would be retroactive to October 1, 1935.

Reclassification of custodial employes in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing is provided in a measure introduced by Representative Stack (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Guards and watchman would be divided into three salary groups. The first grade would get $1,500 to $1,560, the second grade $1,600, $1,620, and $16,80, and the third grade $1,700.

Any employe, after a year's satisfactory service in a lower grade, would automatically advance to the next grade. There would be $60 raises in 18-month periods until the maximum of $1,700 is reached.

Fund Complaints Caused By Similarity of Names

Miss Virginia Sargent, president of the Animal Protective Association, last night said that complaints that funds were being solicited in the name of the Animal Rescue League appeared to result from confusion over the names of the organizations.

Residents in several sections of the city have complained to police about the solicitation of funds for the league.

House Group To Get Report On Airports

Sub-Committee Veils Its View on Plan to Use Federal Funds.

The House District Committee today will receive a report from its sub-committee on airports with a recommendation regarding pending legislation and the proposal of the Department of Commerce to establish two airports with Federal funds adjacent to the National Capital.

Meeting in executive session, the sub-committee yesterday reached a decision, but declined to make it public before reporting to the full committee. It is understood that the sub-committee approved the Commerce Department plan in general, but with some modifications, and probably will recommend the construction of only one airport or two airports more widely separated than Washington Airport and Gravelly Point.

Bill Still Pending.

A bill authorizing the appointment of a commission to select a site is still pending in conference, where it was left when Congress adjourned in August, but it is believed the sub-committee will propose that it be permitted to die.

The sub-committee is understood to be committed to the principle that the Federal Government be encouraged to take the initiative in obtaining funds for construction of an adequate airport for the National Capital, whether or not a second flying field is added eventually.

No other special business is before the House District Committee, as the sub-committee on pubic health failed to complete yesterday its hearings on the bill to license beauty shops.

Three Give Views.

A spokesman for the District Medical Society opposed the measure, labeling it unnecessary, while two beauty shop operators and Carey Quin, an attorney, indorsed it.

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday failed to reach the controversial District-Virginia Boundary Commission report, but Chairman Summers reiterated that public hearings will be held before the committee acts on it.

Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, introduced a bill to renew the patent of the Holy Name Society on its present insignia, the 1909 patent having expired.

Capacity Crowd Hears Post's Travel Lecture

Before a capacity crowd, James N. Findlay, world traveler, lecturer and author, last night delivered the first of the 1936 series of Washington Post Illustrated Travel lectures, describing the beauties of Bermuda and using colored slides to illustrate his lecture. Many of the interesting bits of history connected with this famous resort were told, and customs and traditions of the natives and visitors were recounted.

Josef Hanc, Czechoslovakian consul in New York, will deliver the next Post travel lecture, describing his own country Tuesday evening at the Masonic Auditorium, Thirteenth street and New York avenue northwest. Tickets for this and future Post lectures may be purchased at The Post, or at the auditorium box office on the evening of the lecture.

Window Washer Injured.

Harold Crabtree, 28, of Holden, Mo., was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fractured ankle and possible broken ribs yesterday after he fell from a second story while washing the windows at 3728 Courtland place northwest. His condition was said to be not serious.

Congress Once More Swings Its Influence on Side of Local Theater's Submergence

Stringent Law Drives Theater Men to Action

By Nelson B. Bell.

Once again the battle for the freedom of the Washington theater from the distressing and restricting imposts of an ill-judged child labor law has been lost.

Congressional support of the present legislation that is predicated upon an ages-old presumption that any child in the theater is a victim of persecution, under-privilege and virtual thuggery, continues in effect the asinine statutory enactment that makes it impossible for many of the foremost productions of the modern theater to play Washington. "Old Maid" and "Dead End" are among the many productions banned, the first, last's year's Pulitzer Prize winner, under this crazy piece of law-making.

It is a high tribute to their perception and sound understanding of local legislative problems that Mrs. Mary Norton, who sponsored the bill that went down to defeat by a 4-to-1 vote, and 68 other members of the Congress of the United States had the fortitude to battle tooth and nail, as the saying goes, for the survival of a bit of law-passing that would have done the District of Columbia a world of good.

As the matter stands at present, the Congress has forced further prosperity upon the Free State of Maryland, to the loss of the National Capital.

Maryland Gets the "Velvet."

Horse racing takes thousands of dollars a year into Maryland. There is a bill to re-establish Bennings as a merry-go-round for the bangtails in the District that probably will be defeated just as the child labor business in the theater was. This last move is typical of a shortsighted Congress that is forcing still further money investment and expenditure in our neighboring State.

Which is to say that theatrical interests in Washington are not standing still. If they cannot be permitted to do in Washington those things which, in all conscience, ought to be done here, then they will move across the State line and accord to Maryland those economic and artistic emoluments that ought by all right to accrue to this city.

It is pretty terrible commentary on the judgment of our national legislative body, if you ask me.

Nobody will ask me, but a great many will retort venomously and with cituperative violence upon the biased opinion of this department.

This department's opinion is neither biased nor vindictive. It is merely an expression on the side of justice.

We cannot have "The Ild Maid," the Pulitzer Prize winner of last year, by reason of the rigid law that prevents juvenile performances in the legitimate theaters after a baby's bedtime.

We cannot have any glimpse of "Dead End;" it was only by the substitution of midgets for authentic juvenile actors that "The Green Pastures" ever was allowed to play here.

How much longer must this thing go on? It is not alone my question, but that of the whole world of the theater.

Plans Are Forming.

It will not have to go on much longer, if present intentions are made good. The management that has been the chief sufferer from this stigmatic situation, within the next twelvemonth will have erected its own theater outside the District lines in which all of the presently banned plays may be exhibited—just as those which are prohibited from Boston's staid precincts may be seen in suburban communities.

There is a project afoot to erect a new summer playhouse at Griffith Farms, Md., that will house all of the perfectly innocuous and desirable dramas that Washington's present restrictive laws keep off our local stages.

Griffith Farms, in case you are in doubt about the matter, is the property of Tom O'Donnell, prominent restaurateur, sportsman and all-around good fellow, who is willing to pool interests with Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater, to see if something can, or cannot, be done about the nonsensical ban of ace plays that now places the Capital of the Nation among the small-twon theater-going communities of the country.

Not Amateur Project.

The new theater at Griffith Farms will not in any sense be an amateur "barn theater" enterprise.

It will be an outlet, easily available to Washington audiences for those admirable products of the living theater which now are taboo here because of the purile viewpoint of those who unfortunately now have the destiny of the local stage under their control.

If this were the theater of two or three decades ago with which they were dealing, their point of view might be sketchily defensible.

In the present era of the theater's development, it is merely ludicrous.

No child is subjected to any form of mental, moral or spiritual threat as the playhouse of the living drama now is organized.

Congress ought to have perception enough to know that.

Apparently it has not. Which is just too bad.

Maryland will be doing all right for itself as a "free State" worthy of the name when present plans are consummated—as they will be.

THE CAST.

Doris Franklin	Louise Campbell
Jim Burke	Damon O'Flynn
Charlie	Charles Mather
Rollo Lochart	Nicholas Joy
Professor Bailey	Morgan Farley
Julia Madden	Beth Merrill
Miss Drood	Edith Gresham

Mrs. Daly	Edna Heineman
Gerald Lane	Hal Conklin
Sam Markowitz	Irving Stiefel
Johnny	Harry Gresham

It may be said at the outset that Mr. Alex Yokel has not here produced another "Three Men on a Horse."

He has, on the other hand, devoted his managerial talents—and they are by no means inconsiderable—to the staging of a masquerade that encounters its greatest impetus in its third and last act and for the first two of its divisional interludes dedicates itself to narrative, characterization and climacteric elements that are distinctly trite, slow-moving and not such as to arouse the enthusiasm of seekers after freshness, novelty and variety under the proscenium.

"Julie, the Great" is just another actress. By one of those convenient processes of dramaturgic retrospection she is made to bridge the seemingly considerable gap between a first-scene backstage rehearsal and a last-scene duplicate of the same episode by enacting for those out front the salient incidents in a life that was crowded with the same sort of complexities that probably have harassed every small-time actress who ever made the attempt to crash Broadway.

There is much in the play that is heroic in the matter of feminine fortitude, a great deal that is profane and a little that is obscene. There is even more that is shopworn from long use and disinteresting by reason of its time-honored familiarity.

John Taintor Foote, the author of this latest work to intrigue the fancy of Mr. Yokel, displays a surprising change of literary pace. He is one moment the emotional purist; the next a provocative twister of English into sinister forms and symbols who tosses a shock into scenes that are essentially moving.

The members of the cast contrive to manipulate these unexpected variances of tempo with admirable skill, who does a journeyman job of character delineation in the role of the actress who gives the play its name. Her assumption of the role is one that is surrounded by every artistic attribute necessary to its complete fulfillment.

Associated with the star—and she should be starred, even if she only is featured—are Mary Orr, Damon O'Flynn, Nicholas Joy, Morgan Farley, Edith Gresham and practically all of the others named in the small-type paragraph preceding these rushed midnight observations. Louis Polan is entitled to a tap on the shoulder for a fine low-brow performance of Sid Paul.

Easily Identified.

Many of the characters scattered through the play may be identified in imagination, at least, as active figures in the theater world—if not the legitimate, at least the celluloid. All are played with an adeptness that lends greater luster to the enactment of "Julie, the Great" than the texture of the play deserves.

Despite the many time-worn devices utilized by the author to gain effect, there are those simple elements of appeal that led last night audience to accord the play five or six curtain calls after the conclusion of its last, and best, act.

That may spell a hit for Broadway, or it may spell a failure. If I were compelled to cast a vote I should not ballot on the hit side. But then, there is my good friend, Steve Early, of the White House secretariat, who thinks the thing is a "wow," so there you are.

I wouldn't place it quite as far down the list as "Swing Your Lady"—but almost.

Is Principal in World Premiere

When Alex Yokel's new comedy was presented in the National Theater last night for the first time on any stage, one of the foremost roles was played by Louise Campbell, whose pleasant likeness appears above. There will be found words concerning this new production of the famous sponsor of "Three Men on a Horse" elsewhere on this page of today's issue of The Post. It may not be too much, however, to state here that Miss Campbell is a very charming young woman who would lend distinction to any man's drama.

"Mexico."

"THE MAGIC OF MEXICO." First of a series of five Tuesday afternoon travelogues delivered in the National Theater at 4:30 p. m. Illustrated with motion pictures and still views by Burton and Margaret Holmes, with natural coloring of still photographs by Mildred Petry and Van Altena Studios. Cinematographer, Herbert Cowling; projectionist, Merritt M. Mitchell. Reviewed Tuesday afternoon.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Revealing little-known vistas of natural scenic grandeur, unexpected manifestations of a national penchant for the more artistic pursuits and a completely fascinating disclosure of the amazing achievements of a lost and baffling Mayan civilization, Burton Holmes yesterday afternoon, in the National Theater, inaugurated a series of five Tuesday afternoon travelogues that bid fair to be the most engaging he ever has presented in the National Capital.

Not only is the speaker's subject matter new and unmarred by the usual scratches of time, but his running commentary on the projected views is crisp, expository and amusing.

In many years of admiration of this globe-trotter's visualized explorations, I doubt if I ever have heard him deliver a more felicitous discourse than yesterday's upon the multitudinous and practically unknown wonders of the country lying immediately below the Rio Grande.

The magnificence of Mexico City, D. F., was no more impressive than the intimate view of remote sections of the country that are seldom visited by the casual tourist—much to his loss.

Almost on a par with Burton Holmes' especially penetrating and analystic travelogue on Ethiopia is this journey into the fastnesses of Mexico.

Past Centuries Unearthed.

Mayan architecture comes to life again after centuries of obscuration under jungle growths that made majestic pyramids appear to be green-clad hills; native artistry finds a place in a thoroughly modern market and many of the quaint customs of a nation too close to be so "foreign" to American audiences are brought into the intimate consciousness of spectators and auditors who should know them better.

It is a complete tour of Mexico that Mr. Holmes makes in this comprehensive survey of a kindly and not too-privileged people. He makes their educational and economic problems very real issues in the evolution of an advancing race and brings a simple, but profoundly effective, exposition of their national issues to a sympathetic clarity that should do much to weld a firmer friendship between two countries that are too close neighbors to be as little understood each by the other, as seems to be the historical fact.

Not the least interesting of the pictures presented during the course of the lecture were those of the late Dwight Morrow's mansion in Cuernavaca, where one Charles Augustus Lindbergh probably wooed and won Ann Morrow during a vagrant visit as a transient young aviator intent on charting new airways across Pan-America.

Perhaps the scientific aspects of Mr. Holmes' interesting talk can be epitomized best by repeating that he describes the neighboring southern republic as the "Egypt of the Western Hemisphere."

There seem to be quite as many evidences of an honorable and artistic antiquity in Mexico as any European or Asiatic exploration ever has been able to uncover.

I trust the remaining four of the Holmes travelogues may be as genuinely exciting as the initial subject delivered to a large and enthusiastic audience yesterday.

Threat Letters To Roosevelt Bring Charges

New Yorker Is Indicted by Jury as Author of Two Warnings.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 14.—Austin Phelps Palmer, retired engineer, who lives on Park avenue, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury on two counts charging he sent threatening letters to President Roosevelt.

One of the letters attributed to Palmer read:

"Franklin Delano Roosevelt,

"Communist and Destroyer of Private Business,

"Warm Springs, Ga.

"I warn you if you destroy my business I will strangle you with my own hands. May your soul be exterminated in hell.

"C. R. Nelson."

Dated December 3.

The signature was typed and the letter dated December 3.

Palmer was arrested and arraigned last Saturday.

The other letter, dated November 28, and addressed to the President at the White House, read:

"Dear Sir:

"I read from time to time of attacks on business by the Roosevelt regime of radicals, such as unnecessary public works, municipal lighting plants in territory already adequately served by private corporations with franchises, competing with outdoor swimming pools, in fact the regime we have running in Washihngton at present as well as New York have no respect for law, people's property, private business or anything else.

Denounces President.

"I warn you you are going to pay for it if you damage my investments. I will collect it out of you somehow sooner or later. A mad man cannot run this country long. You are a villain and a scoundrel and I denounce you as a defamer of the Constitution and the man who has violated his oath of office.

"May your term soon come to an end.

"Yours truly, C. R. NELSON."

A portable typewriter on which the Government alleged the letters were written was surrendered to authorities by Palmer.

Palmer told investigators he was a director of a bathing pool and that the Government was subsidizing even free bathing establishments to compete with his place.

Under the indictments, the maximum penalties for conviction would be five years' imprisonment and $1,000 fine on each count.

4 Bodies Recovered Near Sunken Sloop

Washington, N. C., Jan. 14 (AP).—The bodies of four fishermen missing since Monday of last week were found by Coast Guardsmen today near their submerged sloop, off Bluff Shoals, in Pamlico Sound.

They were Vance Clark, master of the sloop Victor, and his brother, Randolph Clark, of Ponzer; Frank Agren, of Belhaven, and Henry Clark, of South Creek. The boat was believed to have capsized in stiff winds.

The Victor was 46 feet long and was owned by Jim Clark, of Ponzer, father of Vance and Randolph.

Burch Urges Virginia To Delay Tobacco Laws

Representative Thomas G. Burch, of Martinsville, Va., said today he thought it would be unwise for the Virginia Legislature to adopt its own tobacco legislation until it is known how Congress will replace the invalidated AAA, according to the Associated Press.

"There is little harm that can be done to the tobacco business right now," Burch said. "The State Legislature has nearly two months to run. The Kerr-Smith tobacco bill actually has not been declared void. Since there is some time before we really get into next year's crop it would seem the better course would be for the Assembly to await results of new Federal action."

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

MARC CONNELLY is now directing the flicker version of his play, "Green Pastures." It is Connelly's first work as a picture director, and since it is an unusual picture, it is a bold venture for the studio.

The first scene being shot for the picture is the opening scene of the play, the Sunday school room, although it isn't the initial scene of the flicker. Director Connelly is trying to coax the little colored children into giving good performances. He has a bundle of toys on the set, and after a good "take" he rewards a child with a prize.

Also on the set there is a Bill Alston from New Orleans, who instructs the colored children and the other performers to speak like colored people. For example, a child will say: "I am an Indian," and to keep in character the child should say: "I'se an Indian."

* * * *

The colored children are amusing to watch. They are having fun. There is a Mrs. Myrtle Sneed who has two sets of girl twins working in this flicker. She sits on the set and takes care of them between scenes. The twins are a big attraction, and Mrs. Sneed confesses that she has another set of girl twins at home.

"Haven't you any boys?" she is asked. "Yes," she answers, "I have a couple of boys at home." "Aren't they twins?" she is asked. "No," answers Mrs. Sneed. "I have the boys one at a time."

Director Connelly is very enthusiastic. He seems to flutter about the set, but he has patience with the performers. He tells the children what he wants . . . as if they were adults . . . and then he tries to lure them into doing it by offering a doll.

He resembles Cecil B. DeMille. Connelly carries a small camera, his own, with him. He takes his own pictures on the set. It may be a still photograph of a scene or merely of the scenery; these are for his private collection.

The children and the Sunday school teacher play a scene. Director Connelly isn't satisfied. They do it again. Director Connelly still isn't satisfied. He wants it played correctly this time. "Otherwise," Director Connelly tells the children, "there'll be no prizes at all." The kids come through.

* * * *

On the set of "These Three," which I shouldn't tell you is from "The Children's Hour," there is a movie boner being photographed. It isn't often that you can see one in the making. On the small table, near the door, there is a bowl of flowers and a telephone. For one "take" the bowl of flowers is removed. Director William Wyler explains it. Alma Kruger has to make a phone call and the flowers are in the way. "There's another movie boner," continues Director Wyler. "It concerns Miriam Hopkins and a coat—but let the movie fans find it. Say, if movie boners will get people in to see pictures, we're going to make them."

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Dawn Patrol.

New York, Jan. 14.

PRESS AGENT who would have had Edward J. Reilly go into the New York Supreme Court and engage in a Gilbert and Sullivan defense of a Broadway show . . . Wires his screaming protest of my exposure of his plan . . . The wire illustrates a condition that exists today . . . Newspapers are not to function as newspapers, as the press agent views it . . . If they arrange publicity stunts, the p. a. reasons that he has given the press enough free meals in Broadway night clubs to compensate for this flim-flamming of the paper and its readers . . . In his telegram, the press agent says that every city editor in New York not only knew of the phony case that was to clutter up the Supreme Court, but approved it and had promised to use it as legitimate news . . . If that is true, Pulitzer and Dana and Bennett must have stirred stormily in their graves, but I don't believe it.

* * * *

I talked with Gov. Harold Hoffman of New Jersey at the Lambs' Gambol Sunday night . . . At that time, he said to me: "I will not interfere with the Hauptmann execution unless new evidence is produced."

* * * *

The last time I saw Roxy was at Jimmy Hines' benefit show for the poor of his district, at the Majestic Theater . . . He was running the stage that night, giving directions for lights and curtains and music cues . . . Watching him, that night, I was thinking back to one morning when I interviewed him at Radio City Music Hall . . . I never forgot that interview, because I had to be there at 6:30 o'clock . . . Roxy was seated at a desk in the twelfth row, center, of the huge theater . . . the blueprint of the theater was spread in front of him . . . Underneath the blueprint was a metal case of lighted buttons . . . To the right was a steel mesh, a loud speaker attachment which carried his commands all over the house . . . "Pick up your contour," he ordered, and magically, the heavy curtain that blotted out the stage divided in the middle and was borne aloft . . . "Let me have blue in A" . . . "Blue in C's" . . . "Blue in B's" . . . It sounded like a new form of hocus-pocus, but he was signaling to the electricians and light men . . . Blue flooded downward, suffusing the domes, and the brown drop became crimson.

It was difficult to follow his rapid, shouted orders . . . "Charlie, Grant, Bill, Gene, Zach" . . . Voices in reply filled the metal disk receiver in front of him . . . "Teddy take one lamp and side-wipe the harp—No. 10" . . . He was like a great painter, but the distinction was that Roxy's easel was a tangle of wires and he used the electric current to get certain effects of color . . . The drop he was lighting was a Minelli painting of a veiled Spanish senorita, with a comb in her hair . . . It looked dull and smudgy when he started issuing his orders . . . But when he had finished, the comb became a striking blood-red, the eyes took on a gray-blue sparkle, the mouth became a scarlet Cupid's bow, the face sheer white . . . What Roxy did was sheer electrical magic to me . . .

New York Ring Moguls Open Gaming Probe at Fiery Session

Fleischer Again Asserts Inspector Bet After Finding Score.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The New York State Athletic Commission, at a sizzling session today, launched an investigation into charges that a member of its staff openly connived with the gambling element in New York fight clubs.

He said an investigation, made at the request of fight fans, revealed that one of the commission's inspectors placed bets with gamblers after ascertaining how the commission's judges were scoring the fights.

Will Appear Again.

Fleischer promised to be on hand Friday with his witnesses, at which time the inspector in question will be called before the boxing moguls.

Cheeks flamed, ears burned and heated words flew back and forth as Fleischer explained his radio address which flayed the commission for "inefficiency and inconsistency" and suggested an official investigation.

He said his blast was not aimed at the individual honesty of the commissioners, but at its general inefficiency and flagrant favoritism, brought to a head last week by its refusal to license Hank Bath, of California, to fight Red Burman. This action led to a cancellation of an entire fight card planned by Madison Square Garden and brought a statement from Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, Garden president, that the commission had harassed the Garden at every turn over a two-year period.

Fleischer Explains.

"Get away from those trivialities," ordered Commissioner Bill Brown. "You have made a serious charge against a member of our staff and put the man in question and the entire commission under a cloud. That is what we want explained."

Fleischer said that after his investigation he had informed Brown as to the identity of the inspector, with specific charges. Brown said he turned the information over to Chairman John J. Phelan. The latter said he had personally "checked" the employe and found the charges groundless.

"Nevertheless, your radio address puts us under a cloud," said Brown, "and we are going to have an investigation. If the State will not appropriate the funds, I'll personally provide a lawyer."

Discontinued Practice.

Fleischer said he disliked to name the inspector because recent investigations had convinced him the man in question had discontinued conniving with the gamblers.

"Soon after I talked with Commissioner Brown," he said, "Gen. Phelan called me on the telephone and at his insistence I repeated the inspector's name with the understanding that Phelan would not discharge the man, but talk to him in a fatherly manner and let the incident go at that. To this Mr. Phelan agreed."

Here is where the fireworks started.

"I deny that absolutely," said Phelan. "I have never talked with this man about this subject. I deny every word of it."

"General, I am surprised that you would make such a statement——" began Fleischer.

"I deny it, I tell you," came back Phelan. "It's my word against yours."

Makes Denial Dare.

"And I'll match mine against yours any day in the week," retorted Fleischer. "You try to put me in the middle of this thing and you'll not get very far. I'll rip things up your back. You did have that conversation with me and I dare you to deny it!"

At this point Fleischer started to stamp out of the meeting, storming, "I'll not stay here and be called a liar."

"Wait a minute," shouted Commissioner Brown. "You can't slip away like that. Both of you are getting away from the main issue. If Fleischer has enough proof against this man (the inspector) he'll go out."

Fleischer then resumed his seat and after a few moments named the inspector for the records.

Fort Meade Quintet Downs Kenilworth

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Laurel, Md., Jan. 14.—The Finance Club of Fort Meade gave the Kenilworth A. C. leader in the Laurel Armory Tricounty Basketball League, its first league defeat tonight with a 44-39 beating. Kenilworth took a 22-12 lead in the first half, but Fort Meade came back to tie the score. After the count was deadlocked four times in the last quarter, Finance took the lead and was never headed. In a preliminary exhibition game the Arundel Club defeated Laurel, 27 to 18. Kenilworth still holds undisputed leadership of the league.

4 Seeded Netmen Advance at Tampa

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 14.—With the exception of John McDiarmid, University of Chicago netter, the four seeded stars who played first-round matches today in the Dixie tennis tournament here had easy sailing.

McDiarmid won in straight sets from Bob Decker, Miami, Fla., youngster, 6-4, 8-6, but was pushed all the way.

Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., seeded No. 1; Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., defending champion and seeded No. 2, and Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, No. 3, arrived late and will play their first and second round matches tomorrow.

Gardner Mulloy, No. 8, won by default from Babe Bartlett, of Orlando.

Myer Too High, Yankees May Stand Pat

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees is "standing pat" for the time being at least, with his ball club because he has no alternative.

"Jovial Joe" admitted this today after he shuffled in from Buffalo and hitched a chair to Col. Jacob Ruppert's desk for their first conference of the year which lasted a couple of hours.

There was a number of deals the Yankees would like to swing. Principally they'd like to acquire Buddy Myer from the Washington Senators, but the $500,000 price Clark Griffith has placed on the infielder is "ultra exorbitant," in the words of McCarthy.

Higgins Is Wanted.

Pinky Higgins, the Athletics' third baseman, is another marked man, but thus far neither McCarthy nor any of the other Yankee officials has been able to come to terms with Connie Mack. McCarthy hinted strongly that he may be ordering a Yankee uniform for Higgins before the week is out.

McCarthy said bluntly that he isn't interested in Freddie Lindstrom, who was cast adrift last week by the Chicago Cubs. Joe dismissed him by saying, "I can't see where he'd fit in the machine."

Here's how Joe figures it: Detroit, pennant-winner for the last two years, is admittedly stronger with the acquisition of Al Simmons; the Yankees, despite "slump seasons" of Lou Gehrig, Lefty Gomez, Bill Dickey and Ben Chapman, finished second and he's counting on that quartet to flash their 1934 form this year; the Red Sox, for all their glittering new talent, still need pitching reinforcements and at best represent "just an improved ball club."

"We'll go in with all we had last year plus young Joe Di Maggio from the Pacific Coast League," said McCarthy. "It may be a big assignment for the youngster, but I'm counting on him to take up a great deal of the slack. The way things look now I'll play him in left field; Champman at center and George Selkirk at right.

Crosetti Is Key.

"There's another factor to be considered, however, a lot depends on Frank Crosetti at short stop. I've received word from the Coast that he's fully recovered from the operation on his knee. If that's true and he and Di Maggio have good seasons we're all set."

Unless the Yankees obtain Higgins, Red Rolfe will continue at third base; Tony Lazzeri, Don Heffner and Jack Saltzgaver will divide the second base assignment, and durable Lou Gehrig at first.

"Our pitchers and catchers are okay—they're the best in the league," said McCarthy. "Gomez, Ruffing, Broaca, Pearson, Murphy and Deshong make up the best staff in the league.

Harlow Renamed Harvard's Coach

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 14.—Reappointment of Richard Cresson Harlow as head coach of the Harvard varsity football staff and appointment of two new assistant varsity coaches were announced tonight.

Howard Odell, backfield coach at the University of Pittsburgh for the last two seasons, was named new backfield coach, succeeding Mike Palm, whose resignation was made known at the football coaches' meeting in New York last month.

Philadelphia to Seek Louis-Schmeling Bout

Johns Hopkins Matmen Defeat Maryland Team

Tech Scores Upset Over Central

By John R. Vosburgh.

EASTERN HIGH raced merrily on toward the inter-high basketball championship yesterday while its aspiring rivals for the title raced nowhere on a treadmill by the simple process of killing each other off.

While the champs were knocking off Western, 36 to 24, at Tech, Tech was upsetting Central, 31 to 20, at Roosevelt. Eastern's path to the title is now smoother than ever, each of the other four schools already having a black mark in the "lost" column although the series is only two playing days old.

Lanky Chick Hollidge again led the Eastern march, scoring 15 points to make his total for two series games an even 30. Western took a 13-to-12 lead at one point in the first half but the Light Blue rallied to win going away.

Tech Never in Danger.

Central, considered Eastern's big threat to the championship, was anything but championship material in the hands of the Techmen, who had lost 45 to 25 to Eastern four days previously. The Mount Pleasanters not only lost but lost so decisively that Tech was actually never in danger after the first minutes of play.

In justice to both teams, Tech was not the same team which lost to Eastern. It would not have lost by 20 points to Eastern yesterday despite the fact that Wes Snow, regular center, is permanently consigned to the sidelines.

While the defensive work of Dobyns and Hahn featured the day and brought smiles to the face of Coach Rusty Thompson, starting his first year at the Tech helm, the Maroon was launching an offensive barrage which had Central often running around in circles. In the

Sharkey Asserts He's a White Hope

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 14.—From behind the bar of his downtown beer tavern, Squire Jack Sharkey, glib former gob and former world heavyweight boxing champion, modestly admitted tonight he's as good a "white hope" as any to go in there against Joe Louis, the dusky Detroit Dynamiter.

This was shortly after he had signed to meet Tony Shucco, New England heavyweight champion, in a ten-rounder at the Garden here February 7—the second step in Sharkey's "comeback" attempt, which was launched two months ago when the former champ twice blotted out Eddie (Unknown) Winston in one of those things which still has the cash customers growling.

Momentarily skipping the possibility that Shucco may put a crimp in his "comeback" campaign, Sharkey talked about future prospects without too much prodding.

"Shucco is a smart fighter and a smart boxer and he'll probably be tough for a while," Sharkey said with a touch of conservatism. "But I'm gradually working myself into good fighting form, so that I'll be able to demand recognition."

A Basket Not a Basket

Louis at Peak; Impressive In Drill

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—Tearing through seven rounds of boxing, Joe Louis reached the peak of training today for his 15-round battle with Charley Retzlaff, North Dakota rancher, in the Chicago Stadium Friday night.

He will box six rounds tomorrow, the same number on Thursday and then hang up his gloves until he shuffles into the ring for his first start of his 1936 campaign for the heavyweight championship.

With Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, watching him, the Brown Bomber's showing was impressive. Jacobs holds an option on Louis' services. Louis faced four sparring partners. He shortened his punches, speeded up his footwork and was ripping the bullseye with his timing. He required a round to get going in the four rounds he boxed Otis Thomas, but after that flashed his best form.

Given Best Workout.

If Retzlaff happens to get lucky and blast the Brown Bomber into defeat, Jacobs revealed that he also has an option on the raw-boned rancher for three fights.

Retzlaff also stepped out today with flashy drill, boxing three rounds with Harry Nelson, a Detroit heavyweight, who will meet Tom Beaupre, the Dallas, (Tex.) butcher boy, in one of the preliminaries.

Dr. Meanwell Is Absolved of Charges

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 14.—Dissatisfied with a status quo report from the faculty athletic board on the controversy in the University of Wisconsin athletic department, the regents today began their own investigation.

After severely criticizing the report made to them, they called 14 students and faculty members for questioning. Included were coaches and athletes.

The athletic board made no recommendation for changes in athletic department personnel in its findings and absolved Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, director, of charges that he encouraged attempts to oust Dr. Clarence W. Spears, head football coach.

Other athletic board recommendations included:

(1) That the regents state their intention to support the athletic board in the exercise of its authority and fulfillment of its proper functions; that is, that it should be in full control of athletics.

(2) That the athletic director be given powers commensurate with his responsibility, which would include the power to hire members of the athletic staff.

President Harold Wilkin, of the board of regents, termed the report "a real disappointment." The regents, however, decided to accept it, but agreed to go into the athletic situation on their own account before arriving at a final decision on the recommendations.

Assailing the board's recommendations, Wilkie said the regents should "tell the athletic board in no uncertain terms that the regents still run the university." He said the report failed to offer a constructive program for Wisconsin athletics.

Guckeyson, Maryland U.'s Javelin Tosser, Will Seek Place on America's Olympic Team

IF Bill Guckeyson's javelin-tossing ability is commensurate with his Olympic ambitions, the University of Maryland may be represented on the United States team in the approaching international games, for the muscular Terp athletic ace has set his heart on being one of the athletes who are to cross the big pond next summer in search of new laurels.

Moreover, if Guckeyson's pole heaving improves by June as much as it did between his first and second years, he is more than likely to realize the fulfillment of that ambition.

Until the quiet, German youth, whose father was a circus acrobat, entered the university, his only association with javelins had been to see another lad thowing it in high school competition. His specialty at that time was putting the shot. But when he arrived at Maryland Coach Geary Eppley put a javelin in his hand and told him to throw it. He did—183 feet.

Last year he improved enough to warrant entering the junior national A. A. U. championships, and finished second with a throw of 207 feet. The chap who won it, Woodrow Clark, of the University of Richmond, happened to be Guckeyson's most persistent rival. They met three times, Guckeyson outpitching him in a dual meet, but losing at the Penn Relays and in the A. A. U. test.

Clark is one of a squad of men who will contest Guckeyson's claim to a position on the team. Three men will be selected, but Bill realizes that it will take some expert pegging to land even third place. Some of those also eyeing positions are Clark, O'Dell, of Manhattan, who is senior national A. A. U. champion with a throw of 219 feet to his credit; Congloff, of Pittsburgh, who has thrown the stick 220 feet, and Mottram, of Stanford.

BILL GUCKEYSON.

Guckeyson, whose name, incidentally, is correctly pronounced Gooky-son, with emphasis on the middle syllable, weighs around 185 pounds, showing no gain since the close of football. He stands 6 feet tall and has long, lithe arms that look capable of throwing any given object considerable distances. He averages "B-plus" in bacteriology, his pet subject.

To further his Olympic ambitions the young man has forsaken basketball this winter and is devoting all of his time to track. It is too early to be throwing the javelin, too cold, but he trains daily and is in perfect condition. If Joe Ryan, sprinter who has been suffering from torn leg muscles, fails to respond to treatment, Guckeyson may run in the dashes this spring.

His favorite sport, so he says, is football, and it gives him his biggest thrill when the competition is toughest. If anything thwarts his ambition, however, it may be the gridiron pastime, for he is bothered slightly by a shoulder injury that first became noticeable in the Florida game. With a bit of luck, though, he expects to be out there chucking the long spear when the first robin flys northward.

G. W. Downs Villanovans, 31 to 23

Colonials Never Headed After Erasing Foe's Early Lead.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

EXHIBITING a sirupy-smooth passing attack and a virtually impregnable defense, George Washington's courtmen carved out their seventh victory of the season last night at Tech High School, carved it out of the perspiring hides of a fighting Villanova contingent by the goodly sum of 31 to 23. And they did it without their little hatchets.

Entering the fray with an impressive record of seven victories in nine games, and regarded as one of the East's outstanding court combinations, the Wildcats lived up to advance notices, but not enough to intimidate the tall Colonials, who attended to their chores in the usual business-like fashion.

In Van Most of the Way.

Excepting for a brief period early in the first half, when they rallied to assume a 5-to-4 lead, the visitors were always in arrears. Near the intermission and for a brief span of the final half they were within whispering distance of their hosts, but they couldn't quite close the gap. George Washington applied the scoring pressure near the end and was going away at the finish. Villanova trailed at the half, 15 to 13.

Outstanding for the downtown school last night was Hal Kiesel, whose long, spare frame controlled the tap-off at center. Villanova was ever a threat when in possession of the sphere, but Kiesel's jumping kept it away from the foe over the greater stretch of play. Scoring honors were evenly divided among everybody but Kiese, whose lone point was made from the charity mark. But they could well afford to miss a few points as long as he outjumped Dan Brennan.

Its Best Exhibition.

The Colonials didn't play their usual slap-happy game of pass and shoot, but handled the ball longer and better, working it in for buckets. Once they drew the entire Villanova team out of position to shoot a pass to Tommy O'Brien, who stood alone under the backboard. It was the team's best exhibition of the season, and, of course, little "He-gets-in-my-hair" Schonfeld's presence in the line-up didn't hurt the cause. It was he who set up the plays in the final half.

The Wildcats, finding the progress to the basket blocked, resorted to long shots and missed frequently. But the Pennsylvanians didn't depend wholly on their long-range guns, and Harry McNally, Mike O'Meara, and Charley Noonan slipped through several times for snowbirds. Jack Robison, as pretty a southpaw chukker as has been seen here this winter, contributed one bucket with a neat shot and tried several more that missed by a Garbo eyelash.

Miss Gulli Snaps All-Time Record

Lorraine Gulli, the Capital's leading duckpinnist and second ranking woman bowler in the country, shattered the all-time city record last night in the Washington Ladies League at the Recreation alleys, compiling games of 156, 123 and 135 for a new mark of 414. Evelyn Ream, of the Ladies District League, was the former record holder, chalking up a set of 412 two seasons ago.

Last week, in the same league, Polly Shugrue, Gulli's team-mate on the El Gees, established a new high season record with a 405 set.

Despite Capt. Gulli's sensational rolling, the leading Shamrock girls tightened their hold on the No. 1 position, setting the El Gees down two games by rolling a 557 game and a three-game total of 1564. The second place Columbians were halted twice by the Nomads; the Beequees gained the edge over the Cardinals and the Colonials swamped the Vee Bees.

Girls' Basketball Team Is Dying to Play Here

There will be doings in the Heurich gym next Sunday afternoon even before the Heurich Pros are slated to commit a game of basketball with the Alabama Pitts All-Stars. In a preliminary game the Agriculture Girls are to entertain the Frederick (Md.) Buddies.

Miss Frances Farigeret, the Buddies' hard-working press agent, last night released the following statement: "We have new uniforms, much different than those we had to play in last season, which were not as pretty and did not have any monograms. Just wearing the new suits has put new life into our team and the girls are all just dying to play in Washington."

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

A FINE old teapot tempest is raging out at College park where a pair of budding young journalists, fresh out of the University of Maryland, have organized the Prince Georges County Post and are crusading against the smug complacency of the Maryland sports publicity department.

POVICH.

Bewailing both the type of sports publicity and the lack of it that has marked the efforts of the Maryland publicity people, Arley Ray Unger and Joe Deckman invited Washington's sports writers and radio sports commentators into solemn conclave the other evening in an effort to effect a remedy. They were rewarded, firstly, with the unanimous agreement that Maryland's sports publicity was not only shockingly inadequate but downright pitiful in comparison to that of at least two other Washington colleges—George Washington and Catholic U.

But it seems that the efforts of Unger and Deckman, born, apparently, only to the desire to present their alma mater in a favorable light in the public prints, drew the resentment of the official Maryland student paper, the Diamondback. In a column authored by Richard Hunt, he chides them thusly:

"It looks like the Prince Georges Post, local 'newspaper,' with two pages of anti-New Deal propaganda and two more of cooking recipes, bedtime stories and aged jokes, is going to take over the duties of the publicity department of the university. Last week they played host to several sports writers from the various Washington journals at the premier eating place of College Park, where the ham in the ham sandwiches is sliced so thin that only one side can be seen . . .

"THE enterprising young publishers of the progressive journalistic gem then told of their profound 'love' for the university and of their desire to improve the 'poor' relations existing between the institution and the gentlemen of the Capital City press. The discussion was long and windy and grew more hectic as the rather poor brand of liquor began to flow freely. Yes, great things were done on this momentous occasion and many a local sports scribe had quite a chuckle after the ball was over."

THERE'S gratitude for you. The most constructive idea yet advanced in the interest of Maryland athletics is hurled back at the authors with insults attached. The attitude of the Diamondback might well stand for the attitude of the University as far as its athletic publicity is concerned. The institution has, in fact, shown no inclination to keep step with the times, its athletic publicity is indeed bad, both in substance and in volume, and it seems to this department that the Maryland people are prostituting the greatest natural publicity assets of any school in the Washington area.

Both Catholic University and George Washington are shaming Maryland in point of publicity in the Washington papers. Their agents are virtually daily visitors to the local sports departments in the interest of their school's publicity, while neither hide nor hair of the Maryland publicity agent, if any, has been seen in a Washington sports department for at least a year.

The pity is, moreover, that Maryland, if it bent itself to the task, might well establish itself as the outstanding college, athletically, of the Washington area instead of running a poor third. No other local institution has the sports facilities that College Park boasts. No other local school has an edifice to compare with the Ritchie Coliseum or Byrd Stadium. Maryland alone among the local colleges has a big league athletic plant.

And, for lack of publicity, Maryland's stars are overshadowed by lesser lights of the other colleges in point of public notice. None can boast as superb an athlete as Bill Guckeyson, who stars in four sports, yet for every line published anent Guckeyson there are ten for G. W.'s Tuffy Leemans and a half-dozen for C. U.'s Irish Carroll. Blame the Washington papers, perhaps, for overlooking the Maryland star, but blame, too, the Maryland U. publicity people who haven't been on the job.

Columbus Drilling For Boxing Opener

Columbus University's boxing squad, claimed as a world-beater by Coach Bobby Goldstein, is undergoing long daily drills at the Jewish Community Center gym in preparation for a three-game scheduled in which it will face Miami (Fla.), King College of Bristol, Tenn., and Brooklyn College.

Goldstein, former Virginia ring captain and Southern Conference titlist, believes that at least four of his men stand good changes in the Olympic trials to be held at Charlottesville, Va., in March. He is particularly proud of Bobby Rawson, the 150-pound son of M. I. T.'s boxing coach, whom he says is fully as good as Maryland's Ivan Nedomansky.

Wilson Teachers Conquer Normal

With Werksman and Mitchell, the "scoring twins," clanging the scoring bell from the opening tap-off until the final whistle, Wilson Teachers College courtmen chalked up their third consecutive victory last night at Maryland State Normal's expense, winning, 44 to 29.

Werksman, who was injured and forced to retire from the game, located the hoop for five field goals, but Mitchell almost doubled this with nine field goals and one foul for 19 points. Phil Fox also had a hand in the rout, coming through with 13 points.

Dodge-Flynn Victors in 3-Cushion Tourney

In the District round-robin three-cushion billiard tournament last night at the Lewis & Krause parlor Johnny Dodge defeated John Gay, 35 to 29, in 81 innings and Gene Flynn required 67 innings to beat El Brin, 35 to 26.

G. U. Prep Rallies To Top St. Alban's

Georgetown Prep's basketball team staged a last-period rally yesterday to take an 18-to-17 victory from St. Alban's School at Garrett Park. St. Alban's went to a 9-to-4 lead in the first half and clung to it desperately throughout the third period.

Opening the last quarter on the short end of a 15-to-12 score, the Little Hoyas began finding the basket with regularity and rushed from 15 to 12 to 16 to 16 and thence to lead, 18 to 13. Two free-shot chances by Charlie Vetterlein, St. Alban's guard, ufrnished the Saints their last 2 points to pull them up to 18 to 17.

Two baskets by Bob O'Shaughnessy, bespectacled Georgetown Prep forward, gave the Prep its last 4 points in the closing minutes. In a junior game preliminary, the Georgetown Prep Juniors took a 15-to-4 decision from the St. Alban's Junior five.

Sleek, $15 Shot, Victorious at Tropical Park by 3 Lengths

Black Falcon Is Second in Feature

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 14.—The Key Largo Purse, a mile and a sixteenth affair for $2,000 platers, featured an off-program here this afternoon. The 4-year-old Ariel filly, Sleek, which won her last start here when entered for $1,300, won even more easily today, taking the track and holding it to register by three lengths in 1:45 flat. The E. Craigie color-bearer paid $15 for $2.

The Erindale Stable's Black Falcon, favorite in the field of five, was second. Jimmy Stout failed to ride up to his best standard but got his mount to the judges a length before Mrs. N. E. Doyle's Old Judge. White Ginger and War Pledge brought up the rear.

Black Falcon Drops Back.

Black Falcon broke well, but dropped back while running between horses to the first turn. Taken to the outside, he raced head and head with White Ginger behind the Flying Sleek, which had stolen a wide advantage and was going easily under Frank Madeley.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al:

Tropical Park, Jan. 14.

There will be no blessed events in the flamingo flock at Hialeah Park again this year. The Cuban birds that add such a touch of color to the green infield never have been known to breed in captivity, but two years ago they built nests along the backstretch, bringing the marl from the track into the infield. E. R. Burch, Miami Jockey Club official, who takes a special interest in the flock, hoped that the birds would lay eggs in the strange, conical, turret-like nests of clay they had constructed. However, the flamingoes built the nests and let it go at that. Last summer the area was flooded in an effort to create conditions for the birds as near as possible to those that obtained in their native Cuba. They built ten nests, but they were only fooling. When the flamingoes first constructed nests, several onithologists came to Hialeah to photograph the flock which now numbers 275. They had hoped to get a "shot" at the eggs. But, as I said before, the flamingoes were only fooling.

BILL.

First race—Chryseis meets better opposition than the field he whipped on Monday, but the ease with which he scored prompts me to prefer him in tomorrow's six-furlong opener. Amqui, with Phillips up, should offer the bulk of contention. Matapeake figures no better than third.

Second race—Among this lot of maiden 2-year-olds in a three-furlong affair Patti appears the most likely to graduate. She will have the clever Sammy Renick up and it appears to be a duel between the Renick boys, with Brother Joe astride Dark Friend. On the word of Clocker Mike, Jaybeejay may take it all, but I place him third.

Third race—Major Greenock has shown a linking for the distance and is not asked to beat much in this lot of 3-year-olds. If anybody heads him it figures to be Midnight Flyer, who will have the accomplished Acaro up. Creme de Menthe, with Fallon, is my show pick.

Fourth race—Dark War, off his last, appears to be the class of this small field. Litzenberger will have the mount and that augurs well. Air Line will be conceding the top one 3 pounds and figures for the place. L. B. Wilson, which could take it all if he runs back to previous races, is best of the rest.

Fifth race—The consistent Bay Bubble is well meant in this race, I hear. Has Big Dinner, with Meade up, to beat, but I believe he can do it. Naughty should edge Fairisk out of the show position.

Sixth race—This appears to be a two-horse affair between Unencumbered and One Chance. I prefer them in the order named, what with Wayne Wright having the mount on the former. Clocker Mike recommends Blessed Again, but I am forced to place him third.

Seventh race—Miss Bam, among the top weights, figures the best here according to the speed books. She has displayed evident ability to go to the mile and sixteenth that this calls for. Greynose and Bright Emerald will offer the main contention.

Eighth race—Polisher, Pass Shot and Dark Mission is the way I like 'em in this one. It will be a battle among the best routers at the course, with Canima R the long-shot possibility.

HYDRAS	115	4	6	6^{2}	6^{2}	6^{4}	$6^{\frac14}$	7	Wholey	87.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEEDLING, $10.10, $4.20, $2.80; SAY DO, $3.80, $2.60; LADY GRANDACE, $2.50.

SEEDLING, well handled, worked his way up, raced SAY DO into submission, and drew away easily at end. SAY DO ran good race. LADY GRANDACE was taken wide entering stretch, but never threatened the winner. BLUE DAN made a game effort. COGARTOWN was knocked back going into first turn.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. The Key Largo. For 4-year-olds and upward which have not won two races since December 14. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:15. Off at once. Winner, E. Craigie's b. f. (4), by Ariel—Petie. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:45.

Horses	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
SLEEK	109	3	3	1^{3}	1^{4}	1^{3}	1^{2}	1^{3}	Madeley	$6.50

WHITE GINGER	112	5	5	3^{2}	2^{h}	2^{h}	2^{1}	$4^{1\frac14}$	Hardy	4.70
WAR PLEDGE	112	1	1	2^{h}	4^{3}	4^{2}	4^{2}	5	Wall	2.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SLEEK, $15.00, $5.40, $3.10; BLACK FALCON, $3.30, $2.40; OLD JUDGE, $2.70.

SLEEK broke very fast, was rushed into a long lead going into first turn, set fast pace and easily held race safe. BLACK FALCON was miserably ridden. He was allowed to drop out of it in early part, moved up on outside in run down back stretch, but never threatened the winner. OLD JUDGE closed ground early. WHITE GINGER had plenty of speed, but weakened. WAR PLEDGE dropped out of it early.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; maidens. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50. Winner, Mrs. E. Leydecker's ch. f. (4), by Trojan—Honesty. Trained by C. Raynor. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEST POLICY, $4.20, $3.10, $2.60; SWEET SUSAN, $10.30, $6.30; TRAGEDIAN, $3.60.

BEST POLICY was rushed into lead, rated along, and stood long drive gamely. BEST POLICY swerved over to the rail entering stretch, interfering with SWEET SUSAN. The latter was moving up fast and appeared to have a good chance to win when she was bothered. TRAGEDIAN ran a much improved race. KRAKATOA showed flash of early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:21½. Winner, A. McDonald's br. g. (8), by King James—Wrack Past. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:45.

METTLE	106	7	4	3^{h}	3^{1}	2^{h}	$6^{\frac12}$	8	Mattioli	7.25

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CROWNED HEAD, $5.60, $3.60, $3.30; HOME WORK, $3.90, $3.70; SMEAR, $4.50.

CROWNED HEAD assumed command going into first turn, was rated along perfectly and stood long drive gamely. HOME WORK moved up very fast on the outside and ran game race. SMEAR closed gamely. INTEGRITY ran good race and is sure to improve. METTLE had early speed. HAPPY FLAG came from far back.

C. U. Five Host To West. Md. Today

Maryland Quintet Travels to Annapolis and May Surprise Navy.

TWO games appear on the basketball docket for today, with Catholic University meeting Western Maryland at Brookland in the only one booked on a home court. Maryland journeys to Annapolis this afternoon for its annual duel with Navy.

The Cardinals are not in the best condition for a tussle with Western Maryland, even though the Terrors are not the power in basketball that they are on the gridiron. "Fod" Cotton's men are off on their plays and marksmanship and the invaders may sneak through and upset them.

Maryland will enter its game in the role of underdog, but Navy is due for a surprise. The Terps are not to be laughed off; they pack a potent scoring punch and, minus the out-moded zone defense, have a better-than-average defense. Navy came through with a surprise win over Penn State last week, but it may have a tougher time of it this afternoon.

Catholic's line-up will see Capt. Bernie Lieb at center; Schmarr and Carroll, forwards; Adamaitis and Pagano, guards. Maryland will start Willis at center; Allen and Buscher, forwards; Thomas and Keller, guards.

St. John's in Rally, Conquers Hyattsville

Spooting Hyattsville High a 10-0 lead in the first quarter, St. John's High came back to win, 33 to 24, yesterday on the Johnnies' court for its ninth victory of the season in ten starts. St. John's scored 14 points in the second quarter while holding the Marylanders to 2 points and led 14-12 at half time. Joe Gallahgher, St. John's freshman flash, led the scoring with 10 points.

Workman at Play in Southern Clime

Sonny Workman, the Washington jockey who has been booting 'em home ahead of the Nation's tracks for years, apparently is finding it difficult to get any speed out of new-type mount. He is pictured astride a 350-pound tortoise on Miami Beach.

Baltimoreans Seeking U. S. Golf Tests

BALTIMORE yesterday projected itself into the battle for National Amateur and National Open sectional qualifying bids with the announcement that the Baltimore and Hillendale Country clubs had filed applications with the Maryland State Golf Association.

Recently it developed that Columbia of Washington had put in a bid for the amateur trials and the Country Club of Virginia, Richmond, for the Open test, both having sent their applications to the Middle Atlantic Association, which last year announced its intentions of serving as a "clearing house" for the amateur associations in this section.

Fredericksburg Is Easy Victim for G. W. Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 14.—The George Washington High basket ball team ran roughshod over Fredericksburg High in the G. W. gym here tonight winning by the score of 37 to 17. Jack Nugent, the Twins' eagle-eyed captain, accounted for 18 points.

E. Dusek Drops First Name; 'Head Man'

THE shoe is on the other foot. Time was when Ernie Dusek was known as Rudy's little brother. But, since Rudy has retired and Ernie has been bowling over all the best wrestlers, the latter young man is known simply and discrectly as Dusek.

Fresh from impressive mat victories over Chief Little Wolf, Jim McMillan, George Zaharias and Man Mountain Dean and fresher still from three rousing draws with Champion Danno O'Mahony, Dusek will descend upon our fair city tomorrow night to test Joe Cox in the feature bout of the weekly card at the Turner Arena.

Third Feature Bout.

This will make Cox's third consecutive feature assignment. In his first match two weeks ago he worked with Joe Savoldi, who was declared the winner via the disqualification route while lying unconscious outside the ring. Last Thursday the lad from Kansas City battered and bruised his way to a draw with Dean Detton.

In preliminary matches, Dean Detton will be pitted against Frank Judson, former Harvard wrestling coach, Irving Coffield takes on Harry Kent and Huge Hans Steinke returns to local mat wars to encounter Ivan Managoff.

Beavers Named As New Head Of Manor

Peoples Executive Picked to Succeed Garrity; Others Elected.

By Dave Herman.

Beavers, a low handicap golfer at Manor, who shoots consistently in the 70s, succeeds Ray F. Garrity, attorney, president for the last few years.

Elected as vice president was Dave Thomson. Eppa L. Norris was named treasurer, and Stanley Willis re-elected secretary. Thomson was re-appointed as chairman of the greens committee, and James Cosgrove as chairman of the golf committee.

Remodeling work on the Kenwood Golf and Country Club course will be resumed in the next few weeks, simultaneous with the construction of a new golf shop, it was announced yesterday by Donal Chamberlain, club vice president.

Several holes on each nine will be revamped, greens and tees improved and bunkers inserted to make some holes tougher.

The new golf shop will be built east of the new first tee and will conform with the rustic background. Chamberlain's plans also call for a general remodeling and enlarging of the clubhouse.

Alex Taylor, Rolling Road professional, is slated for the presidency of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golf Association. Taylor is to succeed Al Tredor, Manor pro. The pros will hold their annual meeting early in March.

Eastern and Tech Win Series Tilts

first quarter, Tech got off to a 12-2 lead.

The Eastern-Western game saw Western trailing 9 to 5, strike out with unexpected fury as the battle moved into the second period. With Wells and Lomax leading the attack, the boys from across the creek presently tied the score at 11-all on Wells' snowbird. Following a heated scrimmage, Lomax took aim carefully and shot successfully, to put the Maroon in the lead.

Eastern really went to work in the second half and with Hollidge and Dean looking after the scoring administered the Westerns a first-class trouncing. Although Burns continued his winning form, his efforts were more than offset by the combined brillance of Hollidege and Dean.

Aldrich Urges Immediate Cut In Idle Funds

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 14.—A note of deep concern over the problem of huge excess banking reserves and low interest rates ran prominently through the annual reports today to stockholders of several large New York banks.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, advocated immediate action by Federal Reserve authorities to reduce the excess reserves of member institutions, which he said was a matter of "grave consequence to the financial community and to the economic welfare of the whole country."

James H. Perkins, chairman of the National City Bank, told shareholders of the difficulties encountered in "making adequate profits" because of the excess funds and lack of borrowers, and a similar complaint was made to stockholders of the First National Bank by Jackson E. Reynolds, president.

In contrast to the pessimistic stand taken on these questions, however, were the bright and cheerful statements of these titans of finance concerning the business situation in the country.

Cheerful on Outlook.

"We are pretty optimistic here about the trend of business," Aldrich said in answer to a question. "I think everything possible will be done in Washington and elsewhere to make the present upward trend continue." Perkins was equally optimistic.

In urging Federal Reserve officials to act at once to cure the evils bound up with excess funds, Aldrich said:

"The question of timing corrective action is a matter with which the heads of central banks since the war have almost invariably found it difficult to deal. The issue always presents itself as a choice between preventive active and curative action. Frequently when the business situation is over-delicate or when conflicting purposes are involved, central banks are apt to postpone preventive action until indubitable signs of crisis manifest themselves and drastic curative action becomes mandatory. * * *

Recommendations.

He recommended a combination program of raising reserve requirements and disposal of whatever proportion necessary of the $2,430,000,000 of United States Government securities held by Reserve banks, as measures that would bring the desired effects.

Perkins dwelt at length with obstacles in the path of banks in placing sound loans. The great in-

Riggs Bank Votes Regular Dividends

Following the regular meeting of the directors of the Riggs National Bank, Robert V. Fleming, president of the bank, stated that the regular semi-annual dividend had been declared upon the preferred stock of the bank payable February 1 to stockholders of record December 31, 1935. The board also declared the regular dividend on the common stock, $2 per share payable today to stockholders of record December 31, 1935, and $2 per share payable April 15 to stockholders of record March 31.

Mr. Fleming said that while not required to provide for reserves for retirement of preferred stock until the period commencing February 1, the bank had added a substantial sum to the reserves which it had been building up to be used at a later date in the retirement of preferred stock and that the directors also had authorized the transfer of $100,000 from undivided profits to surplus accounts.

Wilson, George O. Vass and Hilleary G. Hoskinson.

Karl W. Corby, who served on the board for several years, was also returned to the directorate today.

National Metropolitan.

Stockholders of the National Metropolitan Bank elected C. F. Jacobsen, for many years cashier of the bank, to membership on the board of directors. At the same time the following members were re-elected for the coming year: Louis D. Bliss, Frederick de C. Faust, William F. Gude, Charles B. Hawley, A. A. Hoehling, Charles Jacobsen, O. H. P. Johnson, R. M. Kauffmann, Dr. J. Thomas Kelley, jr., Otis B. Kent, Maj. Henry Leonard, A. Lisner, F. H. McCormick-Goodhart, Frank F. Nesbit, Arthur A. O'Brien, C. F. R. Ogilby, Merle Thorpe, George W. White, Henry A. Willard 2d and W. K. imsatt.

Washington Loan & Trust.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., Dr. James Alexander Lyon was added to the board of directors, all other members being re-elected. Dr. Lyon, who is well-known as a writer and lecturer on diseases of the heart and circulation, was a major in the Medical Corps, United States Army, and was the recipient of sitations during the World War and of the Croix de Guerre with gold star from France. He is a member of the Army and Navy, Chevy Chase, Metropolitan and Chincoteague gun clubs.

Other members of the board are William H. Baden, Hiram Bingham, John H. Clapp, Frederick V. Co-

Stocks Show Firmer Tone in Moderately Active Trading Over Broad List; Bonds Strong.

New York, Jan. 14.—Trading in stocks was active, but not exuberant. Volume was around 2,750,000 shares, a little higher than yesterday. The list was broad, but price changes were comparatively narrow. Prices were near the best in the last hour, with low-priced shares in favor. Commodities were steady. May wheat was unchanged at $1 a bushel in Chicago.

Meat and oil led stock speculation. Packing company shares, to be visited by money changers with impounded processing taxes, spurted with heavy volume. Wilson and Armour issues led the rise into new high ground. Recent favorites among the oils continued in the ascendancy. Socony-Vacuum rose above its best price of last year. Consolidated and Houston were active. The Pure Oil preferred issues jumped 7 and 8 points on news of plans of paying off back dividends. Ohio, Tidewater Associated and Shell Union attracted attention.

Motor shares failed to move out of the rut, but some of the accessories did well. Rails were mixed. Chesapeake, Pennsylaniva and Pere Marquette moved up. Santa Fe had some profits clipped from its price. Utilities were firm. Telephone topped 160. Chemicals were heavy and small declines took place in the steels and mail orders. Metals were weak, silvers especially so, but sugars hardened.

Specialties included Cash Register and Remington, which rose large fractions on greater activity; Electrical & Musical, a favorite of the morning, and Advance Rumley (taken over by Allis Chalmers), quoted ex the distribution of a half share of the Allis plus a dollar in cash, on each share. The price trebled on a few sales.

Peering Into Fog.

Foreign exchanges had a quiet day. Some support probably has come for all leading currencies, and in any event, speculators are finding the pace of change with respect to the dollar's future pretty hot. Nobody here pretends to predict whether the next deficit will be three billions or seven billions.

Little chance appears to exist for anything under the smaller figure and it might easily go higher than the upper estimate, depending on what sort of books are kept and how much bonus is voted the farmers in spite of the AAA ruling. Also the factor of new taxation must be reckoned with. Receipts under present rates from 1935 earnings, while subject only to estimate, seem to be the best known of any factors in the equation.

Meanwhile, the Government bond market was reported as unusually strong. Dealers did not profess to know why buyers should act as they did, but they found a considerable demand from country banks. The banks now have considerable money and no other means of using it than investment in Government issues. Many of them had anticipated a break in the Government bond market to follow opening of Congress, and now are afraid they will miss a market. Nobody seems to want to sell, which must be regarded as a misleading indication of how investors regard the current fiscal policies.

Money rates are bound to continue low. This week's statement of reporting member banks in leading cities shows the effects of a return of year-end cash. Reserves are up sharply and deposits are down. Government bond holdings are rising and loans are contracting.

Before shedding tears that might scald his face, the Attorney-General might be told that a big difference exists between investors and sportsmen. Mr. Cummings thinks that the companies which withheld the tax did not "play ball" with the AAA. An investor is one who puts his money under management that will stand up for the rights of invested capital; those who are careless about the management they select come under the head of ballplayers, boondogglers, gamblers, or just plain suckers.

Sympathy.

If any sympathy is on tap at the Treasury Department or the Department of Justice it ought to go to those who are being publicly accused of dishonesty and exposed to criminal prosecution, merely because they aren't popular at Washington, or because they refused to fork over what they believed they were under no legal or moral obligation to pay.

Seat Sale.

Sale of a stock exchange membership at $170,000, a rise of $15,000 over the last previous sale, seems to be better evidence than the current rate of trading production that brokers expect a rousing inflationary market, and that before a great while. Seats are now the highest since February 3, 1934, when one was disposed of for $190,000. With 3,000,000-share sessions commission brokers can make lots of money and floor traders, with price swings wide as they are at present and with many orders on specialists' books, won't exactly starve.

Strictly Confidential.

Loew's will report $1.08 a share for the fourth quarter ended November 21, against $1.23 for last year. Earnings in current quarter improving . . . General Electric will report a rise of 18 per cent in 1935 orders over 1934; gain for fourth quarter was 14 per cent . . . Some buying of gold stocks again taking place as hedge against inflation . . . Walworth and Crucible on list of customers' men . . . Stock exchange report may be ready shortly and red ink again anticipated, without meaning much.

Banking.

Making money in banking these days is no offhand job. The most skillful bankers find it a difficult task to keep earnings moving against the mounting current of expenses (a large item being the deposit guaranty provision) low interest rates (largely the result of Government policy), and slack demand for credit, both for speculation and for legitimate business, notwithstanding what Chairman Jones of the RFC may have to say. It would be no good for the banks to give away their depositors' money, and good borrowers are far more concerned with the uncertain outlook for dollars under an unbalanced budget regime, with mounting taxation, and with the well maintained animosity of New Dealers toward business enterprise as a matter of principle.

Outlet.

A common note ran through the remarks of presidents and chairmen at the meetings of the national banks held today, namely, that large losses have had to be taken, chargeable to the depression, that New Deal burdens have grown, and that even investment in Government bonds is becoming less profitable. To the outsider, looking at bank statements, it would seem advisable if many banks would cease trying to stay in the banking, but instead would devote all their funds to the Government bond market. That is the only use most of them can find for their money. When such an expertly and wisely managed institution as the First National Bank finds it uncertain whether the dividend can be maintained, it might well happen that the wishes of some New Dealers—that the banks be forced out of business—will be fulfilled.

Gold Verdict Upheld On Railroad Bonds

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Circuit of Appeals for the second district has affirmed a lower court decision holding that the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. should pay the gold equivalent of a $16,383 judgment held by Anglo-Continentale Treumand, A. G., it was revealed today.

The European plaintiff sought payment of interest on bonds in Holland Guilders which have risen in value since devaluation of the dollar. The railroad refused to pay in anything except dollars.

Machine Tool Orders Gain 88% in Year

Cleveland, Jan. 14 (AP).—The National Machine Tool Builders Association announced today the industry received orders totaling approximately $94,000,000 in 1935, a gain of 88 per cent over the previous year. The 1934 estimated total was $50,000,000.

Sales aggregating $89,260,966 were reported by 155 companies last year, the announcement said. The $94,000,000 volume is an estimate based upon data submitted by the reporting companies, the association explained.

Stock Seat $170,000, Advance of $15,000

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—A membership in the New York Stock Exchange was sold today for $170,000, up $15,000 from the previous membership transaction and a new high since August, 1933.

This was nearly triple the depression low of $65,000, reached in April of last year. The record high price for stock exchange seats was $500,000 registered in 1929.

$35,000,000 Wheeling Steel Bonds Offered

An issue of $35,000,000 first mortgage sinking fund 4½ per cent bonds, series A, of the Wheeling Steel Corporation of Wheeling, W. Va., is being offered today by a group of investment banking houses headed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. The bonds are dated February 1 this year and are due February 1, 1966. They are priced at 101½ and interest.

Net proceeds are to be applied to redeem on April 1 at 102 the outstanding $15,695,000 first and refunding mortgage 4½ per cent sinking fund gold bonds, series B, due April 1, 1953, and to discharge $14,000,000 indebtedness to various banks, out of which was provided funds to redeem on January 1 at 103 a total of $9,037,000 first and refunding mortgage 5½ per cent sinking fund gold bonds, series A, due July 1, 1948. The balance will be used for additions and improvements to plant for additional working capital and for other corporate purposes.

Associated with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in the public offering are Lee Higginson Corporation and Brown Harriman & Co., Inc.

$50,000,000 Bills 3.8 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated January 15, 1936, and maturing October 14, 1936, which were offered on January 10, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

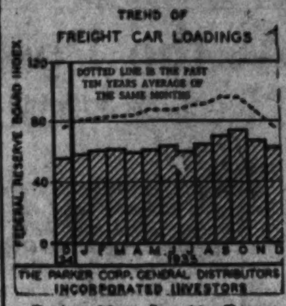
The total amount applied for was $190,515,000, of which $50,050,000 was accepted.

Pork Prices Down 4½ Cents a Pound

Chicago, Jan. 14 (AP).—Wholesale pork prices today had declined 3½ to 4½ cents a pound since the AAA and its processing taxes, including that on hogs, were invalidated eight days ago by the United States Supreme Court.

The break, paralleled by cuts in retail pork prices in many stores, was the sharpest in months.

Car Loadings Show Business Expansion



Boston, Mass. Jan. 14.—December car loadings were 10 per cent greater than a year ago; in fact, it was the biggest December since 1930. Compared with a year ago, lumber shipments made the best gain, amounting to 42 per cent.

Col. Ayres Sees Good Start for Business Year

Chief Factors, He Says, to Be Natural Forces and Artificial Subsidy.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 14.—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, business statistician of the Cleveland Trust Co., said today that business was getting off to a good start in the new year. In his monthly bulletin, Col. Ayres said that "three major factors will probably determine the course of general business activity in 1936."

"We cannot measure their relative importance, nor do we know how their influences may shift," he said. "We do know that business is getting off to a good start in the new year."

The "three major factors," he said, are the natural forces of recovery, "the subsidy that recovery is receiving from emergency expenditures of government," and the relationship between business and government.

"We have ahead," he said, "a political campaign in which most of the issues will be questions of economics, while most of the arguments will be appeals to emotion.

Business and Government.

"It seems unlikely that the underlying struggle between agrarianism and industrialism will be given recognition. If the Congress, the campaign, the pending investigations and the Supreme Court do not inject new and serious uncertainties into the conditions under which business must be conducted, this third factor will probably not assume large importance.

"If this turns out to be the case, and if no important war breaks out, the controlling factors in continuing recovery promise to be the natural forces of expansion and the artificial ones of subsidy.

He cited as examples of the natural forces of recovery, the replacement of goods in which shortages have developed, the making of more automobiles, construction of more homes and the building of more machine tools.

Col. Ayres said that practically all the recovery has been confined to manufacturing. "The revival in the steel industry," he said, "has largely come from increased individual purchasing power."

GEE WHIZ, I'VE BEEN WATCHING NEARLY AN HOUR. I WONDER HOW LONG HE'S GOING TO STAY IN THERE.
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.: Copyright, 1936, by Publishers Syndicate
IT'S GETTING DARK. I CAN'T WAIT ANY LONGER. GRAN'MA WILL WORRY. I'LL SEE OFFICER FINN TOMORROW, AND TELL HIM WHY I HAD TO GO.
LATER
YOU'RE NEARLY AN HOUR LATE, DENNIE. WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN?
OFFICER FINN WENT INTO THAT OLD WAREHOUSE, AND I WAITED FOR HIM TO COME OUT. BUT HE DIDN'T COME.

dustrial corporations upon which the banks depend for an outlet, he said, have more money than they can use, due to the cessation of normal capital expenditures and reduced inventories.

Reynolds elaborated on similar problems facing the First National and predicted earnings would "pretty soon" fall below dividend requirements unless there is a reversal in trend.

Losses of the two largest banks incident to participation in a syndicate, which advanced $39,500,000 to the Van Sweringen brothers, recently liquidated, were revealed in the annual reports. Chase lost $4,599,000 of its $5,500,000, and National City dropped $3,750,000 of the $4,500,000 originally advanced.

Net earnings of the Chase Bank in 1935 were $15,340,189, compared with $16,509,309 in 1934. The National City reported net earnings of $13,048,190 against $14,623,463, and First National had net income of $11,354,103, compared with $11,939,689.

EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY

You can answer ads from now until doomsday, but unless you make up your mind to go to work you are going to be among the unemployed for some time to come.

If you can have confidence in a company rated AAA-1 that employs thousands of men who are making a comfortable living NOW—we want to talk with you and determine your qualifications for our type of work. We have a wonderful new invention that has been shown in Washington only a few months, but has been tested and approved by the most critical experts in the United States.

Because it is new and has not been worked to death, many men who had never had experience are making from $38.00 to $80.00 per week, with free training, and this is a year-round business and is permanent for the men selected.

It will cost you nothing to come in and talk it over. See Mr. Williams, personnel director, at Room 1008, Vermont Bldg., Vermont ave. at L st., Wednesday, between 9:30 and 11 a. m., for a personal interview. Can also use representatives in Maryland and northern Virginia. Men in these territories write for details.

HEDGE AGAINST INFLATION
By Buying 4-Family APARTMENTS

Inflation-dwindling dollars—presents a very real problem to people with cash or securities with fixed returns, which inflation will cause to shrink in value. Income properties advance in value as the dollar declines.

This company offers for your inspection new four-family apartments 100% under lease that offer sound investment opportunities. Make a down payment and let the income pay off unpaid balance. Low prices. Easy terms.

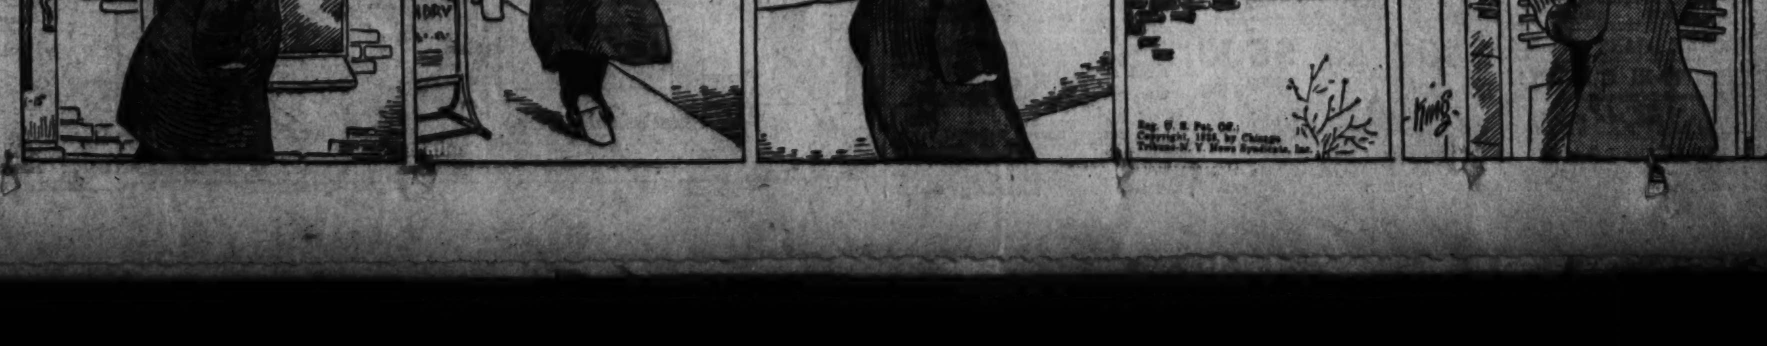
Got Walt Going Round and Round



I HAVE A FEELING SOMEONE IS FOLLOWING ME.
IN SPITE OF WHAT I TELL PHYLLIS THAT BIRD IS GETTING ME JITTERY!
YES, I'M SUSPICIOUS OF EVERYBODY!
I WONDER WHY I HAVEN'T HEARD FROM HIM LATELY.
IT'S WORSE WHEN I DON'T HEAR FROM HIM THAN WHEN I DO.

OKAY, JIM! THE NEGOCOLL CAST HAS SET LONG ENOUGH. NOW WE'LL REMOVE IT BEFORE MR. BOYLE RECOVERS FROM THE EFFECTS OF THAT ETHER.

HA! A PERFECT NEGATIVE. EVERY DETAIL TRUE!
I'LL PUT HIM ON THE COT IN THE NEXT ROOM WHILE HE'S SNAPPING OUT OF IT.
YOU SEE, JIM - IN MAKING A MOULAGE REPRODUCTION OF A FACE YOU TAKE THE NEGATIVE AND LINE IT FIRST WITH A WAX-LIKE MIXTURE CALLED HOMONIT.
CHESTER GOULD
AFTER THE HOMONIT MIXTURE HAS SET, YOU COAT IT WITH A STRONGER MATERIAL CALLED CELERIT. THE CELERIT MAKES THE CAST STRONG ENOUGH TO BE HANDLED WITHOUT BREAKING, AFTER IT IS REMOVED FROM THE NEGATIVE.
SEE THE FINISHED MOULAGE TOMORROW.

There I stood. With the corpus delictum the map, in my hand..in the center of that crowd. Alone.
You were magnificent. In a tight corner. But your story was perfect.

Post's Cruising Reporter Given Thrill in Chase

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, is cruising in a police car. Motorists who violate the law are stopped. Their side of the story is recorded. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the fifth in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Thrills—the kind that make your hair bristle—topped our cruising quest for "the reason why" yesterday.

Clipping the miles at 40 an hour, with Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer as a passenger and Lieut. Frank Varney, traffic division, piloting our police cruiser car, we raced through uptown traffic in determined pursuit of a law-breaking truck driver.

We took Director Van Duzer along as official "score keeper." He wanted to see what was happening and a general survey of traffic conditions was what we planned. But our plans were changed abruptly.

It was at Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest, where the truck was first sighted. Lieut. Varney had stopped our cruiser and we were watching for "no left turn" violations at the intersection.

The traffic light had just turned red for southbound vehicles. The lumbering truck, its driver ignoring the signal, continued at high speed down Eighteenth street. Lieut. Varney jammed our cruiser in gear and we were off.

Truck Weaving In and Out.

Ahead of us, the truck was weaving in and out of oncoming traffic. We were delayed for a moment by vehicles crossing Columbia road and when we were again under way, the huge hauler had gained several blocks.

In another moment, we were in close pursuit. The truck driver continued his dangerous and vicious tactics—weaving and taking the right of way. Breadth of the truck prohibited our drawing abreast on narrow Eighteenth street. We trailed at a safe distance. All of us were on edge. Intersections whizzed past. Cars turned out for our horn. Pedestrians scattered.

And then, without warning, the truck turned left into S street. The driver "cut" the corner at high speed. When he straightened out, the pursuing police car apparently caught his eye in the rear-view mirror. He slowed down to a snail's pace. We drew abreast at Seventeenth and S streets northwest. Lieut. Varney jumped out and approached the driver, a colored man.

"I ain't in no hurry," was the driver's reply.

"Do you know that you 'jumped' a red light, weaved through traffic, cut a corner and failed to signal for a turn?" Lieut. Varney demanded.

Didn't Know He Was Dangerous.

"No, sir," answered the driver.

"Do you know that what you were doing might have brought injury or even death to someone—that you are a dangerous man to be allowed on the streets?"

Again the answer was "No, sir." Then, as if to offer an explanation, the driver said he was paid by the load. (He was hauling dirt.) The more loads he carried, the more money he made. This answered the "hurry" question. He admitted that he was familiar with local regulations governing traffic. He said the truck carried 5 tons and without a load weighed 12,100 pounds.

His case will be placed before traffic officials for proper action. (Van Duzer has recommended a $300 fine for first offense speeders.)

It was sometime later when we again took up our original survey plans and started in search of additional violations. Throughout the afternoon, we drove slowly through uptown and downtown traffic. But the longer we looked the better conditions became.

With the exception of a few minor infractions, we found nothing more. Traffic was unusually light. (This was suggested as the reason.) Those who were on the streets went out of their way to obey regulations.

"Either Washington motorists have suddenly become traffic conscious or we just aren't striking the right spots," laughed Van Duzer.

Three Violated Alley Regulations.

We changed our route and stopped near the entrance to an alley on downtown F street. The law says a vehicle shall come to a full stop and yield the right-of-way to pedestrians before coming from an alley.

While we watched, three trucks emerged from the alley entrance. None of them stopped. Pedestrians were forced to step back. All three of these trucks belonged to the United States Government. A driver was stopped and asked if he knew what to do before leaving an alley.

"Sure," he said. "Stop." But he "guessed he wasn't thinking about it." He was told to "think" the next time.

Then, on foot, we sauntered down toward Thirteenth and F streets. Signs on all four corners and above the traffic signals read: "No turns." We waited for someone to turn, in spite of the signs. We didn't wait long. A motorist made a right turn. He was halted.

"What have I done?" he asked. He was told.

"Oh, excuse me. I didn't notice," was the response.

Nine dead in traffic so far this year . . . repeated violations . . . lame excuses . . . sheepish apologies . . . and today is another day.

This Is a Frequent Violation of Traffic Rules

Crash Injuries Kill Policeman; D. C. Toll Now 9

David Crouch, 56, on the Force 32 Years, Dies; Boy's Leg Broken.

The ninth District traffic fatality in the 14 days of the new year was recorded yesterday when Policeman David Crouch, 56, of 4625 Ninth street northwest, died in Casualty Hospital from injuries received January 5.

Crouch was driving his private automobile home after being relieved from his day's duty at the Eleventh Precinct, when he collided at First and D streets northeast, with a street car operated by Homer Graves, 40, of 237 Longfellow street northwest.

The policeman was treated for a fractured skull and pelvis. Graves was released in custody of a Capital Transit Co. attorney to appear at an inquest.

Appointed to the police force in 1903, Crouch had charge of the printing of the Police Bulletin at one time. He received many commendations, one for apprehending a band of women jewel thieves in 1910. He is survived by his wife and one child.

Woman Crash Victim Dies.

Mrs. Getrude Lewis Mattern, 63, of Washington, Pittsburgh and Erie, Pa., died yesterday in Casualty Hospital from a fractured skull received in a bus-auto collision on the Crain highway Monday.

Her husband, Edwin L. Mattern, retired lawyer and author, and his second cousin, Catherine Grace Snyder, 50, of New York, were killed outright in the same accident when their car collided with a Richmond-to-Baltimore bus at the corner of Crain highway and Central avenue.

Mrs. Mattern came from an old Pennsylvania family and was prominent for years in the activities of the Federation of Garden Clubs in that State. Her garden at Glen Erie, her summer place on the shore of Lake Erie, was widely known for its beauty. She and her husband will be buried in Pittsburgh tomorrow.

James Flannery, 16, of 332 Seaton place northeast, received a broken leg yesterday when struck by an automobile while riding a bicycle at First and K streets northeast. He was treated at Sibley Hospital. Police said William V. Burns, 32, 622 F street northeast, driver of the car, was charged with bad brakes at the First Precinct.

One Motorist Is Held.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury released one man and held another for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act after inquests into the traffic deaths of Mrs. Ella Crowell, 72, 1346 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and Owen V. Pumphrey, 65, 1622 Potomac avenue southeast.

In the first case, William F. Donaldson, 33, 1316 D street southeast, was found guilty of negligence in the death of Mrs. Crowell, who died in Providence Hospital shortly after being struck at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast Monday.

Witnesses testified the woman became bewildered when she stepped into the street in front of a bus parked at the curb unloading passengers. Donaldson, who was driving a truck, said he did not see the woman until it was too late to stop.

Hollis Coffelt, 35, of 26 T street northwest, motorman of the street car that struck Pumphrey Saturday night at Fourteenth and New York avenue northwest, was released in the second inquest. The jury held the death accidental.

B. & O. Freight Gains.

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended January 11 totaled 40,628, an increase of 2,383 cars over the same period of 1935.

'Leaners' Hurt U. S. Progress, G. O. P. Is Told

Representative From Ohio Asserts We Once Were 'Lifters.'

We once were a Nation of lifters but now we are a Nation of leaners, B. Frank Murphy, for 14 years a member of Congress from Steubenville, Ohio, last night told the annual business meeting of the National Capital Republican Club. His address was entitled, "America, Whitherbound?"

After outlining what he asserted were the fundamental qualities of adventure, sturdiness and character, Murphy asked:

"What has happened to change Americans from a self-reliant people into what we see today? We used to support government, now we look upon government to support us."

More than 50 persons attended the meeting and listened to scorching attacks on the New Deal.

Leo. A. Rover, appointed chairman of the State Republican committee earlier in the day, declared the coming campaign would not be merely a fight between two political parties.

"It will be a battle," he cried, "between Democratic, representative and American government on the one hand, and autocracy and foreign rule on the other."

Douglas Hatch, president of the local Young Republicans, reminded his audience how important the young people were. It is easy, he said, who will have to pay the bills for this Administratoin and they will not have much money handed down by their elders with which to pay them, thanks to the steep inheritance levies.

Florida Posse Hunts Bank Bandits in Wood

Cross City, Fla., Jan. 14 (AP).—More than 100 men tonight searched the heavily wooded sections between here and Mayo, Fla., for five bandits who today held up the Dixie County State Bank here and escaped with about $3,000—at least two-thirds of it in silver.

Sheriff F. L. Anderson said he believed the bandit car had been bottled up. Cashier B. S. Preston was hit on the head with a pistol during the robbery.

Can you be Fooled on this taste?
Not a chance!
People who like a robust whiskey are keen and quick to take to Old Overholt, the American straight rye bottled in bond under U. S. Government supervision—the requirements of which, as to full 100 proof, storage in barrels, and freedom from addition of younger spirits, are more rigid than those of any other country in the world.
You'll like this cordial full rye flavor, and you'll never be fooled on it. You'll also be protected against substitution and numerous "just-as-goods." Old Overholt is at least 4½ years old.
If you're the sort of adventurous soul who'll try any good thing at least once, order Old Overholt at your favorite bar and at your liquor store. Now lowest in price since repeal.
